

GERMANY SENDS EMISSARIES TO LONDON WITH REQUEST THAT BRITAIN MEDiate IN REPARATIONS

Denies U. S. Approved Invasion of Germany

HUGHES CORRECTS IMPRESSION HELD BY FRENCH PEOPLE

Declares America Never Attempted to Pass Judgment on Application of Versailles Treaty.

SECRETARY'S PROPOSAL WAS ONLY SUGGESTION

Say Remarks That French Had Power to Determine Own Action Brought Misunderstanding.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, January 18.—The state department took steps today to correct any impression that the Washington government has attempted to pass judgment on the application of the terms of the treaty of Versailles to French occupation of the Ruhr. It was flatly denied that Secretary Hughes, in his conversation with Ambassador Jusserand, had ever expressed the view that France had the right in a legal sense to carry out that occupation.

The denial was prompted by publication in a French newspaper of an article saying that Mr. Hughes had so informed the ambassador, at the same time, however, expressing American disapproval of the expediency and wisdom of the course the French authorities had decided to adopt. The department's spokesman would not go beyond the flat assertion that this published statement was not in accordance with the fact in so far as the French right under the treaty was concerned.

Since the United States is not a party to the treaty, it is obvious that no American official would put himself in the position of seeking to express an opinion as to what obligations the document imposed on the signatory powers. They alone could be the judges of the scope and meaning of the pact and no signatory power, it is held, could interpret its opinions with diplomatic propriety.

It is possible that there has been a misunderstanding of the statement frequently made here that the French government had sovereign power to determine its own course of action and that the United States, in proposing a compromise plan, could do nothing more than suggest. In that connection it has been said by American officials that there were questions of treaty rights involved in the reparations situation with which this government had nothing to do and that the first essential to success of the Hughes plan was necessarily the voluntary action of the allied powers to take it up.

French Deputies Make Pugilistic History Thursday

Fists Fly Recklessly as Members Clash on Immunity for Communists.

BY HUDSON HAWLEY.
Paris, January 18.—Dignified members of the chamber of deputies limped from the hall Thursday night with black eyes, bleeding noses, scarred faces, cracked knuckles and cauliflower ears.

Someone on the government side of the house said, "I move that we consider lifting the parliamentary immunity from Deputy Cachin so that he may be brought to justice for conspiracy against the nation."

The fight was on. One hundred deputies—fighting, kicking and yelling—made pugilistic rather than parliamentary history.

ALLEGED MEMBER OF MASKED PARTY NAMED IN COURT

Witness Identifies Man He Declares Held Him Up Night of Mer Rouge Murders.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Bastrop, La., January 18.—Testimony tending to establish the identity of at least one member of the masked band which on August 24 kidnapped Watt Daniel, T. F. Richard and several others, and tortured Daniel and Richard to death, mutilated their bodies and after weighing them cast them into Lake LaFourche, was offered today at the open hearing being conducted here by the state of Louisiana into the activities of hooded men in Morehouse parish.

Fred Eubanks, a foreman witness, testified that he was held up by masked men on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge highway that evening and that he recognized Newt Gray as a member of the party.

Much of the testimony both yesterday and today centered about Gray and certain questions put to him while on the stand Tuesday and Wednesday drew from his counsel the objection that they bordered on the "third degree" variety.

Judge Fred M. Odum, as a result of the protest, ruled that Gray need not answer any question that might tend to incriminate him.

Gray's first appearance on the stand was Tuesday. He testified that he was notified by William Hingstbotham, a planter residing near Mer Rouge, that he had received a warning letter, mailed in Monroe. The letter was received by Hingstbotham.

MAYOR SIMS HITS OPPONENTS TO USE OF CITY AIR FIELD

Mercenary Motives Actuating Persons Fighting 116-Acre Tract, He Says, in Defending Site.

BLAMES OPPOSITION ON "SELFISH POLITICS"

Mayor Sims Says He Will Await Report to Be Made by Delegation of U. S. Army Engineers.

Charging that opposition to use of the 116-acre tract located on Hemphill avenue and Peachtree creek as a municipal aviation field is actuated by mercenary motives, Mayor Walter A. Sims Thursday reiterated his approval of the Peachtree site already owned by the city, and declared he would abide by the decision of government experts in approving the site.

A delegation of army engineers attached to the government aviation mail service department, in Washington, is expected to arrive in Atlanta Saturday to inspect the city's property. Mayor Sims asserting that he would follow their recommendations.

"Result of Politics."

"I am certain," declared the mayor, "that the concerted opposition to the disposal plant property is the result of selfish politics."

"There is one thing certain, the city has no funds with which to buy additional property for this purpose, and even if it had I would oppose buying more when the city already has a site that can be utilized satisfactorily for a landing field."

"The Watkins' field property on the Brown mill road, which has been offered the city for $75,000, in my opinion, is no better than the Peachtree creek property, and the price is far in excess of the appraised value of it."

"I have been informed by Captain O. J. Trunk, of the government air department at Fort McPherson, that he and other officers at the fort have inspected the disposal plant property and found it suitable for a landing field. He has assured me that the government will send a delegation of experts here, probably Saturday, to inspect it. I shall, therefore, await their report before recommending to council that this property be utilized for aviation purposes."

Declares Site Inadequate.

Van H. Burgin, appointed by former Mayor Key as a member of the Atlanta air board, took sharp issue Thursday with the advocates of the disposal plant site, declaring it inadequate for use as an aviation field.

"The city is wasting time," declared

ENGINEER IS DEAD BY HIS OWN HAND

C. H. Dunbar Dies Thursday Night of Two Bullet Wounds Inflicted in Dependancy Wednesday.

Bullets he fired into his own breast at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning ended the life of C. H. Dunbar, 63, at 8 o'clock Thursday night in a local hospital. His aged wife was at his bedside when he died. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Mr. Dunbar had been an invalid for several years, having been forced to retire from the throttle as a locomotive engineer because of illness and disabilities of age. For a long time he had been morose and depressed, his wife told hospital authorities when he was taken to the operating table.

Mrs. Dunbar was awakened at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning by the crash of two revolver shots in her husband's room. Rushing in she found him lying in bed, unconscious, with blood flowing freely from his chest. She recalled that the night before he had asked her casually on which side of his chest his heart was. She had told him it was on the left side.

His bullets were aimed apparently into the left side but too far to the side to pierce the heart. They penetrated his lungs and his death was a joint result of loss of blood and shock imposed on his already weakened nervous system.

Wallace Reid Dies, Fighting Valiantly Against Dope Evil

IGNORANT TO LAST THAT WORLD KNEW TRUTH

Hollywood, Cal., January 18.—Wallace Reid, premier motion picture star, died at the Bankers sanitarium here at 1:45 Thursday afternoon, at the end of a long fight to rid himself of the drug evil.

The terrific strain of Wally's valiant fight against the habit broke him down and finally ended his life, according to physicians.

Wally, ill more than six weeks, was believed to have been on the way back to recovery.

He had broken himself of the habit, and it was expected that he would soon return to the screen.

Mrs. Dorothy Davenport Reid, the film star's wife, was at the bedside when death came, as were their small son, William Wallace Reid, Jr., aged six, and their adopted daughter, Betty, aged three.

Mrs. Reid, who has been spending the major portion of every twenty-four hours for several weeks at her husband's bedside, was in a state of collapse.

With her aid, doctors had said, Wally would fight his way back to a clean life and an honorable resumption of his screen career.

Mrs. Reid Tells Story.

It was Mrs. Reid who, when rumors were flying thick and fast, courageously faced the world and admitted that her famous husband had been in the clutches of narcotics, but that he had stopped the habit at the risk of his life and was winning the fight to come back. Mrs. Reid said he began the habit during a stay in New York two years ago. He was ill at the time, and took it in order to continue work. He was still ill when he returned to Hollywood, but insisted on working in order to get a picture out on schedule time.

Hospital records show that at the time Reid started to effect a cure he was taking four grains of morphine a day.

First hint of his condition came last October, when he was struck with temporary blindness due to the Kleig lights aggravated by the nervous condition which he was in at that time. He determined to make his last stand against the narcotic octopus. Taking Teddy Hayes, Jack Dempsey's trainer with him, he went out into the hills and there, despite tortures to nerve and muscle, stopped the "dope" habit. He and Hayes remained in the open for nearly a month.

Physically Helpless.

Although at the end of this time he declared he no longer had any craving for dope, he did not regain his health.

He finally became worse, and at last submitted to a rigorous three-day examination by the leading physicians of the country, who were unable to diagnose his illness.

The examination so exhausted him that he collapsed and was taken to the Dr. Bankers' sanitarium, and later the Dr. Bankers' sanitarium.

There he steadily got worse, and it was then feared for some time that he would die. He apparently rallied, however, and had recently been reported making slow progress toward recovery. During the last week he was reported as regaining a little strength and taking solid food for the first time.

His disease was a sort of dysentery, which wrecked the fibers of his body.

At the time of his death he only weighed 135 pounds; formerly he had weighed over 200.

Wally never knew that the world had learned the torturing secret which he had guarded for years, and which was at one time nearly blackmailed out of him, according to his wife. He still imagined that only his few intimate friends knew that he had been a user of dope, but was supremely happy that he had at last rid himself of its toils.

Hoped for Recovery.

Mrs. Reid declared two days ago that she believed Wally would be out of the hospital in about six weeks. As soon as he was able it had been planned to have him go to Catalina island and spend several months in outdoor life and exercise.

Jesse L. Lasky had made plans for his return to the studio about July 1. Wally was born in Missouri thirty-two years ago and was one of the most popular actors in the game.

"At the age of 21 he went to work in the old Selig lot. He shined shoes, and later doubled in thrilling stunts for Tom Mix and others."

Reid met Dorothy Davenport while she was acting girl parts with the same company, and married her.

Later the couple went into a business partnership as well and worked at the Universal studios, writing, directing and acting their own one and two-reel films.

Wally was reported to possess a fortune of nearly $1,000,000 a year, but it is understood much of this

Ghostly Legions of 'Lost Cause' Will Answer Call of Lee Today

CELEBRATION AT CAPITOL TO HONOR COMMANDER

BY LOYD A. WILHOIT.
From Florida to Maryland, from graves long covered with curtains of sheltering green where he buried the lost soldiers of "the lost cause," and from holy ground dotted with serried crosses—the ghostly legions of Dixie will assemble today to the sound of phantom trumpets to honor the memory of their matchless chieftains of the civil war.

Across the entire south for which they fought and died, the spirit line of skirmish will answer the command "fall in," rusty muskets clapped in hunger-weakened hands; tattered clothing flapping with something of old-time jauntiness about emaciated shoulders.

And haphay, in the silent stretches of deserted woodlands the rebel yell that struck terror to invading hearts in the "60s" will again ring thinly in the crisp air, and faint strains of "Dixie" will bring smiles to the faces of the shadowy host.

Today is the birthday of Robert Edward Lee, commander in chief of the armies of the Confederacy, and while the living voice their reverence of him and mourn the cause for which he fought, the dead themselves will be quickened to the notes of "reveille" sounded by the heralds of history.

In Atlanta the celebration will be jointly in honor of Lee and Jackson, the birthday of the latter being January 21. In view of the fact that the

DEBT DISCUSSIONS TO BE RESUMED THROUGH EMBASSY

Refunding of Britain's War Liabilities to U. S. to Be Argued Again Next Week.

SEE COURSE CLEAR FOR AGREEMENT

Official Spokesman for English Is Optimistic on Eve of Departure of Commission.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, January 18.—Discussions between the American and British debt commissions were adjourned today, but with an understanding that negotiations for the refunding of Great Britain's huge war debt to the United States would be continued through the British embassy here after the arrival of the British mission at London at the end of next week.

Upon the conclusion of the final joint session of the commissions, an official spokesman noted the expectation that the consultations would have the British group are to have with their cabinet immediately after they reach London in principle in time for action by the American congress at the present session, which ends March 3. It was agreed that unless there could be an understanding within that time a refunding arrangement could not become operative under one year.

British Optimistic.

The official spokesman declared there was not anything that should stand in the way of an understanding within the very near future. Generally speaking, he said, a plan had been shaped up but there remained for final determination the more important points, including the exact interest rate and the amounts of the annual payments to be made by the British government. On these, he continued, the commissions were not very far apart.

With the British commissioners in possession of full and first-hand information as to the situation here, the spokesman said they could inform their cabinet in detail just what would have to be done to meet the American views and the reasons why those views were held.

Stanley Baldwin, the British chancellor of the exchequer, and head of the British group, was represented as holding the opinion that he could accomplish more in this regard through a personal conference with the cabinet than through even the most extended cable exchanges.

Immediately after today's session, Mr. Baldwin and the other members

SENATE DEMANDS OIL CORPORATION PRODUCE BOOKS

Serves Subpoena on Owner of Company, Who Refuses Data at Fall Inquiry.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, January 18.—Refusal by Harry E. Sinclair to concede the right of the senate oil investigating committee to the complete records of the Hyva corporation, a Sinclair-owned private investment company, caused a sensation today at the committee hearing and resulted in service upon Mr. Sinclair of a subpoena to present the records Monday.

Mr. Sinclair accepted service of the subpoena. In a statement prepared for presentation to the committee he declared he was willing to produce any records of the Hyva corporation bearing on the matters under investigation by the committee, but that he was not willing "to produce the records of the Hyva corporation that pertain to other matters not pertinent to the subject under inquiry."

Representatives of Mr. Sinclair said tonight that the head of the Sinclair oil interests intended to stand squarely behind his statement, holding that the committee was without power to inquire into matters not pertaining to changes in prices of crude oil, gasoline or other petroleum products such as set forth in the senate resolution directing the investigation. This was taken to mean that although Mr. Sinclair may take the stand tomorrow to testify on operations of his many other companies, the showdown between him and the committee will not come until Monday.

Sidetrack Fall Matter.

The committee sessions previous to the clash between Mr. Sinclair, on the one hand, and Chairman La Follette and the committee attorney, Gilbert E. Roe, on the other, had been enlivened by a tilting of the lid of the Teapot Dome controversy. The Teapot Dome matter was brought before the committee through questions by Senator Brockhart, republican, Iowa, a committee member, who after Mr. Sinclair had made several statements with respect to the con-

A Man Has Returned From Near East --- With the Truth!

His hitherto untold story, to be published Sunday, January 21, in The Constitution, for the first time in any form, will startle you into new thoughts of the now dangerous Near East situation.

He is Mark O. Prentiss, the American industrial engineer, who, as special representative of the Near East Relief, played one of the leading parts in rescuing many thousands from the Smyrna disaster.

Prentiss presents evidence which will change the record of history. In this story, the Turks are not named brutes and barbarians, the Armenians are not driven back like meek sheep—they wear no halos.

Prentiss, the trained engineer and experienced business man, has seen the inside of the alarming Near East situation through eyes unclouded with preconceived notions and propaganda. He is impelled to write his startling series of articles by the American spirit of honesty and fair play.

FORMAL MEETING ON MORATORIUM QUESTION DELAYED

Believe Effort on Part of Italy to Arrange Compromise Brought Postponement.

REPARATION EXPERTS REPORT NEW PLAN

Would Have Wholesale Manipulation of All Nation's Debt to Lessen Germany's Liability.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
London, January 18.—The German government is sending a confidential mission to London to request the British government to mediate between France and Germany, said a dispatch to The Times from Essen.

DISCUSSION OF MORATORIUM PUT OFF.

Paris, January 18.—(By the Associated Press.)—Formal discussion of Germany's request for a moratorium, which was to have begun tomorrow in the reparations commission, has been postponed for a few days and it now seems probable that initial consideration of the question will not come up until next week.

Among the most important reasons advanced for this delay is the reliably reported effort on the part of Italy to arrange a compromise between Paris and Berlin with Italy as mediator of the present differences.

Although Italy approved the French policy of economic seizures in the Ruhr valley, it is now clear that Premier Mussolini does not approve of the extensive military operations which the French declare were made necessary by the German policy of passive resistance.

In well informed diplomatic circles it is explained that, while Italy does not intend formally to withdraw her present co-operation in the Ruhr movement, all Mussolini's efforts are being directed toward an agreement between France and Germany which would make extensive military operations unnecessary.

Italy Wants Hearing.

Italy has requested that an Italian plaid yet unrevealed be discussed at the same time as the French plan, when the commission takes up the question of granting a moratorium, and France is believed to have consented to this. England, it is pointed out in an authoritative quarter, would look with interest on Italian intervention in the present situation, but would be strongly inclined to remain out of any possible compromise arising from it, on the ground that a compromise would not solve a problem which needs drastic treatment.

On the other hand, certain important reparations experts have been working on a plan during the last two weeks which it is hoped may pave the way for an allied settlement, including Great Britain, on the whole question of reparations.

The plan is based on the supposition that America may directly or by implication reduce the British debt by one half. One of the experts who have been working out the scheme gave an outline to the Associated Press this evening.

"I feel that the real chance of an allied accord on reparations lies in the consideration of this plan," said he.

The British reparations plan fixed the total German indemnity at about $7,000,000,000 gold marks. The French demands have been roughly fixed at about twenty-five or twenty-six billion, leaving eleven billion for Great Britain, Belgium and Italy. Great Britain would like to recover from Germany about the same amount she owes the United States, this is about seventeen billion gold marks.

"If the United States reduced Great Britain's debt one half, as certain rumors have indicated, she might, Britain would owe the United States eight and one-half billion gold marks. Allowing the one and a half billion gold marks of French gold which Great Britain has retained, she would then only have to get seven billion from Germany. The eleven billions remaining after France was satisfied would be reduced to four billions after Great Britain took the seven billions necessary to meet the reduced American debt.

"The four billion gold marks would not be sufficient to meet the Italian and Belgian claims, which total nine billion, but the difference between four and nine is not too great to prevent a settlement. In fact, it is quite probable that France and Great Britain would give up the several billions needed to make an allied accord possible.

"There would then remain the fixing of the length of the moratorium, which would not be difficult. The allies are already substantially in agreement on financial reforms in Germany for stabilization of the mark and balancing the budget. France would have to remain in the Ruhr, but merely as a measure of coercion to force payment, not as an economic guarantee.

"Of course, it all depends on the United States."

TRUCK KILLS AGED MAN IN EFFORT TO AVOID TRAIN

Columbus, Ga., Jan. 18.—(Special)—James M. Cooper, 77, of Reynolds, Ga., was fatally injured this afternoon when he was struck by an automobile truck driven by Amos Nelson, 28, of this city.

The aged man was struck by the truck as it was being turned toward the sidewalk to avoid striking a passing freight train at the intersection of Tenth avenue and Wynnton road, according to information obtained by the police.

The victim of the crash was visiting his brother in Columbus. Several bones in his body were broken, but death is believed to have been the result of a broken neck. He died en route to the hospital.

The truck driver is being held by the police under a murder charge. An inquest by the coroner's jury is scheduled for tomorrow night at 6 o'clock.

FIRE SWEEPS ELON COLLEGE; LOSS IS $150,000

Greensboro, N. C., Jan. 18.—Elon college, the denominational college in the south of the Christian church suffered a fire loss of between $150,000 and $160,000 this morning when the main administration building of the institution was completely destroyed. The fire, of undetermined origin, was discovered about 6:30 o'clock. At that time flames had burst through the roof and the windows. There is no fire fighting apparatus in the village and the building was reduced to ashes within a couple of hours.

Shortly after the first fire had burned itself out flames burst from the roof of the alumni building, a men's dormitory immediately adjoining the administration building. Quick work on the part of the Burlington fire department, which had been called to the scene, added by students, saved this structure.

has been used in his fight against dope.

Wally's last picture was "Mr. Dilings Spends His Dime."

He never finished it.

Forced to leave in the middle of the picture's making, he was put on half-pay by Jesse L. Lasky, who did everything possible to aid the star in his attempted comeback.

Reid's story was one of the most dramatic that has ever come out of filmdom and was made public by his wife after persistent rumors had gone abroad concerning Wally's condition.

Shortly before Christmas Wally, as congratulated by Will Hays, movie czar, on his splendid fight, Hays and Lasky made a personal visit to his bedside.

Reid was a patient for a week at the hospital of Dr. Charles Blessing, now under indictment for conspiracy to violate the narcotic laws. Hospital records, seized by federal agents, showed that instead of getting better, Wally got worse at the institution. Over $4,000 was paid for the week's treatment, Mrs. Reid declared.

"Fair weather friends," who imposed on Wally's hospitality, came and drank his stock of private liquor, and kept late hours at his house, were largely blamed by Mrs. Reid and her mother, Mrs. Alice Davenport, for Wally's downfall.

In his pictures, many of which are now showing on screens throughout the country, Wally always played the part of the typical red-blooded, active American. He was one of the hardest workers in the movie game, having made no less than ten pictures per year for the two years previous to his fatal illness.

Work was practically suspended at the huge Lasky studio when it was learned that Wally had died.

Owing to the suddenness of his death, no plans have as yet been made for the funeral. It is expected that work will be stopped in practically all of the Hollywood studios on the day of the funeral.

Wally's death is the first that has ever occurred in the ranks of the nation's big film stars. John Bunney, who died at the height of his career several years ago, is the only other notable for whom the final curtain has gone down.

Negress Will Appeal Her Case to the Superior Court.

Recorder George E. Johnson Thursday afternoon upheld the constitutionality of the city zoning ordinance when he fined Christine Parks, negress, of 15 Taylor street, $50 and cost and ordered her to comply with the law. The woman, through her attorneys, immediately announced her intention to appeal the case to higher courts in contest of the constitutionality of the law.

The Taylor woman, according to charges preferred, lives in a block which the zoning map specifies as a "white district." A case against her was made Tuesday by City Building Inspector C. J. Bowen, who acted as prosecutor.

Future action of higher courts will be awaited with considerable interest, in view of the fact that this is the first legal test of the constitutionality of the zoning ordinance.

M'ADOO PLANS TO VISIT GEORGIA AT EARLY DATE

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel, Washington, January 18.—(By Constitution Leased Wire).—Former Secretary of the Treasury, William Gibbs McAdoo, under the Wilson administration, who has been at the capital conferring with democratic leaders for the past few days, said today he expected to visit Georgia immediately after his departure from Washington this week.

Mr. McAdoo, who is a Georgian by birth, will go to Augusta first to attend to business matters, and will then visit several points in the state, he said, renewing old acquaintances. During his stay in Washington the former cabinet member has been seen around the corridors of the capitol shaking hands with democratic leaders, having held conferences with several members of the senate. His presence has given rise to statements in certain circles that he will be an active candidate for the democratic nomination for president in 1924, although he is represented as saying he does not want the honor.

Girl Declares Methods Of Dr. Coue Cured Her of Stammering

Washington, January 18.—(Special).—A girl about 17 stepped off the platform in the huge ballroom of the Willard hotel this afternoon, and with a few quiet phrases demolished most of the frequent objections heard against the reality of the power of auto-suggestion.

She just had her first lesson in front of a thousand people to whom Dr. Coue was lecturing, and she had gone through the handclasp test with success, though nothing in her demeanor indicated personally needed curative aid. As she passed some one stammered and asked:

"Well, young lady, what is your complaint?"

"Oh, nothing," she replied calmly. "I stammered and now stammer no longer," and she continued that answer to questions without a trace of a stutter.

DECLARE ARSENATE SUPPLY IS SHORT

Committee Reports Imports Will Be Necessary to Furnish Poison to Farmers of Country.

Washington, January 18.—Imports will be necessary to furnish southern cotton planters sufficient supplies of calcium arsenate, used in fighting the cotton boll weevil, according to a joint report of agriculture and interior departments transmitted to the senate today in response to a resolution by Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina. Domestic producers of calcium arsenate, it was said, could not supply the product fast enough to meet early requirements this year. In 1924, the report said, domestic producers probably would be able to meet the demand.

Annual requirements of white arsenic were estimated in the government report at about 12,000 tons and although the domestic production last year was said to have reached its highest point there remained insufficient time, it was stated, "to satisfy the urgent demands," which extends to May or June. Imports last year were low and not much improvement early this year was said to be in prospect. The senate recently adopted a resolution by Senator Smith to appropriate $10,000,000 for purchase of calcium arsenate and soda fertilizers for sale at cost to cotton planters.

GHOSTLY LEGIONS WILL ANSWER CALL

of that marvelous man upon whom was at one time sundering conferred the title of "Crazy Tom," the same whose unparalleled military achievements are today the subject of earnest study in the war colleges of Europe. Blood will leap at the story of Bull Run, Sharpsburg, Fredericksburg, Spotsylvania, Gettysburg and a score of fields which ran red with the blood of southern heroes. And with memories of Lee and Jackson will come tender thoughts of those other immortals of Dixie—Sherman and Johnston and Ashby and Ewell and Pelham and Hill and Georgia's own great general, Gordon.

Veterans to Attend.
Chancellorville, where the south won a decisive victory but suffered her greatest loss in the death of Jackson, will be recounted. Speakers will tell of the steady decline of the south's star from that moment until the surrender at Appomattox, where the exhausted and thinned lines of Lee staggered forth to stack their arms and turn their eyes toward devastated homes and fields.

In the audience will be the last of the Georgia line, gray veterans who live at the Old Soldiers' Home. And after the ceremonies, many will be the stories of Sherman's march and the siege of Atlanta recounted by those old fellows whose minds constantly dwell in the gallant days when sabre swung by hip and the saddle was home.

Program at Capitol.
Band music by cadet band of Georgia Military academy.
Invocation, Rev. T. P. Cleveland, chaplain of Camp 150, U. C. V.
Group of southern songs, including "Dixie" by Girls' High school glee club.

Address, Rev. B. R. Lacey, Jr., pastor of Central Presbyterian church.
The exercises will be staged jointly by Atlanta chapter of United Daughters of the Confederacy, and Camp 150, United Confederate Veterans, Commander Haygood, of the latter organization, will preside, and Mrs. Charles T. Phillips, president of the local U. D. C. chapter, will greet the veterans. After this, Miss Anna Bennett, custodian of crosses of the same organization, will present crosses of honor to the following veterans and sons of veterans: W. A. Dabney, J. S. Copeland, Dr. J. H. Lorenz and Thomas J. Tryon.

MAYOR SIMS HITS AT USE OF AIR FIELD

Mr. Burgin, "if this is the property on which it wants the field located. Government officials have several times inspected the site and declared positively that it wouldn't do as an air mail station. It is only large enough to land one plane, and is otherwise unsuited for the government's needs."

City council at its session last Monday approved the report of the finance committee which refused to include an appropriation of $3,000 to pay a year's rental on the proposed Watkins' field property. Councilman Edgar Watkins introduced an amendment to the finance budget which would take care of this matter, but it was voted down by general council.

ALLEGED MEMBER OF PARTY NAMED

on August 24, the day a baseball game and barbecue was held here. Higginbotham, according to Gray, showed the letter to Gray, "Jap" Jones and Thomas Higginbotham, a relative. It was decided that if any attempt were to be made on Gray's life it would occur that night, and Gray said he volunteered to go to the Higginbotham home to act as a guard.

At Baseball Game.
Gray said his wife and members of his family were at the baseball game and after his wife refused to let any one but himself drive her home, he returned to Bastrop and asked Rufus Eubanks, a youth, to take the other members of his family. He explained that Eubanks did not know how to shift the gears of the automobile and that he took him out on the Bastrop highway to show him. He said it had been arranged prior to leaving Bastrop that Thomas Higginbotham was to pick him up on the highway and take him to William Higginbotham's home.

He turned the machine over to Eubanks a short distance from Bastrop and waited for Thomas Higginbotham. Higginbotham failed to appear and he walked to the home of William Eldridge. While sitting on the Eldridge porch automobiles loaded with masked men and also a truck passed by. He declared he saw the caravan, but did not notice the number plates of the cars. Gray declared Thomas Higginbotham picked him up later and took him to William Higginbotham's home, where he stood guard until about midnight.

Thomas Higginbotham, he said, took him to his own home at about that hour. Gray was on the stand more than two hours and was subjected to a barrage of questions.

A newspaper dispatch Wednesday said that Gray was one of four men who would be identified as members of the kidnapping band. He was recalled to the stand at the opening of court, but his attorneys objected to his testifying further on the ground that he had been placed in a suspicious light as the result of the newspaper article. The court overruled the objection but permitted Gray to leave the stand to consult further with his counsel.

Thomas and William Higginbotham later were called and both corroborated Gray's testimony.

Rufus Eubanks today testified that he had been asked by Gray to drive Gray's family home as Gray wanted to stay in Bastrop to attend to some business. Eubanks said he was thoroughly familiar with the gear shift on Gray's automobile and that Gray drove the machine out on the Bastrop highway himself and turned it over to him at or about 200 yards from where Daniel Richard, W. C. Andrews, "Tot" Davenport and J. L. Daniel were kidnapped. He said Gray got out of the machine about half an hour before the kidnapping occurred and that he drove back to Bastrop to pick up Gray's family and took them home.

Fred Eubanks, who testified that he had known Gray well for more than four years and resided within half a mile of Gray's home, told of being held up on the Bastrop highway near where Rufus Eubanks said he had dropped Gray.

Asked how the men were dressed, he said they wore black hoods. Asked whether he was able to identify any member of the party, he said that he knew one man, having recognized him by his clothing. He named Newt Gray as the man.

Kutus Eubanks, recalled at the afternoon session and questioned concerning his drive from Bastrop, said he passed Tom Higginbotham's car on the highway and that Higginbotham was alone. Both Gray and Tom Higginbotham previously had testified that Gray was in Higginbotham's car at that time en route to William Higginbotham's home.

Dean Ashcraft, field manager for the Southern Carbon company at Spkyer, in the course of his testimony, made the first statement tending to establish an alibi for T. Jeff Burnett, former Morehouse student, who is now under arrest on a charge of murder in connection with the deaths of Daniel and Richard. Ashcraft was a boarder at the home of Burnett at Spkyer, he said, and attended the baseball game and barbecue at Bastrop on August 24 and returned to Spkyer before 7 o'clock that evening. Burnett was to relieve a watchman at the carbon plant for the night and when Ashcraft saw him, Burnett had donned his working clothing. The working clothes are kept in the bath house, he said, and the fact that Burnett had them on was proof that he had already been to the plant.

Questions put to witnesses today clearly indicated that the state is "feeling around" in the hope that something might be developed unexpectedly. Ashcraft was questioned at length concerning a wedding that occurred at Spkyer the evening of December 21, the night Lake La Fourche was dynamited, and which resulted in the discovery of the bodies of Daniel and Richard the next day.

Questions about the use of dynamite at the plant of the carbon company, he testified that he had placed about twenty cases of the explosives in the magazine about three months ago. The dynamite, he said, was used to clear land where a new plant was being erected.

Questions were put to other witnesses concerning their families, their church affiliations, acquaintances with various citizens of the county, their occupations and what reports they had heard concerning the kidnapping.

Discuss "Torture Machine."
Even the so-called "torture machine" with which the bodies of Daniel and Richard were supposed to have been broken and bruised came in to the interrogation in an indirect manner. T. B. Pratt, Jr., was questioned about the equipment of the small saw mill operated by his father and himself, the length of the carriage upon which logs are saved, the kind of "dogs" used to hold the logs in place on the carriage, how many teeth the "dogs" had and what kind of a log loader is used.

Harlie Rogers, nightwatchman at the carbon plant, also was among today's witnesses. He was identified during the latter part of last week by Harry Neelis, former Bastrop garage man, as having with T. Jeff Burnett held him up on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge road on August 17.

Neelis said he was on his way to Mer Rouge when he was stopped by Rogers and Burnett who at the time were unmasked. They commanded him to return with them to near Harlie Rogers, where Neelis said he had been detained a few minutes before a band of hooded men.

Gave Men Lecture.
The garage owner testified that after Burnett and Rogers arrived with him on the scene, they put on their blackhoses and joined the band. Neelis said he was detained for about 30 minutes. The band followed him into Bastrop and seized Richard, who was in Neelis' repair shop, in front of Neelis' repair shop, escorted him away and gave him a lecture.

Rogers was grilled concerning the kidnapping of Richard on August 17. He denied having been with Burnett at any time on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge road and only knew Richard when he saw him on the streets of Bastrop. He was questioned at length on minor details, on the kidnapping of Teeger Starnes, which he claimed he knew nothing about, and then later on the dynamiting at Lake LaFourche and the discovery of the bodies, which he said occurred when he "was sick in bed."

Rogers admitted he was a kinsman and he did not know Watt Daniel personally he had heard reports that Daniel was a "bootlegger" and a "gambler" which he did not approve of.

The manner in which the state's attorneys questioned both Ashcraft and Rogers indicated that they may figure prominently in the case. For three hours they were grilled about the social life of Spkyer and Bastrop, the Bastrop celebration, the kidnapping of Daniel and Richard and the dynamiting of Lake LaFourche.

Both men were told that there would be no further examination for them for the present, but that they would be subject to recall any time.

DISMISS TWO SUITS AGAINST E. Y. CLARKE

Trial of Third Damage Suit
Will Be Resumed
Today.

Of three damage suits for $50,000 each, instituted by three former grand goblins of the Ku Klux Klan against E. Y. Clarke, imperial giant, two were dismissed in United States District court Thursday, and trial of the third was continued until Friday.

Attorney W. H. Terrell asked dismissal of the suit instituted by F. W. Atkin, and an order from A. J. Paden, requesting that his suit be dismissed, was presented in court.

Lloyd P. Hooper was the plaintiff in the third suit. He alleged that Mr. Clarke, who at that time was imperial klaff of the Klan, secured a warrant against Hooper charging larceny after trust with the view of damaging his reputation and not because he believed Hooper guilty of the charge.

All three suits were brought by men who held positions under Mr. Clarke.

SENATE ASKS BOOKS OF OIL CORPORATION

troverly quickly clamped down the lid, declaring the committee did not want to go into the broad features of the Teapot Dome lease as granted the Sinclair interests by the Harding administration "because that is to be investigated by another committee."

The statements made by Mr. Sinclair with reference to Teapot Dome included testimony that although the lease did not cost Mr. Sinclair anything he assumed under its obligations amounting to between $50,000,000 and $70,000,000.

Mr. Brookhart asked what Mr. Sinclair gave the Mammoth Oil company, the corporation operating the Teapot Dome. In addition to the contract in return for virtually the entire stock of the Mammoth, Mr. Sinclair replied the transaction on his part involved nothing but the contract, which he said had a great potential value. The senator attempted to ascertain the value of the stock received by Mr. Sinclair and the witness frankly agreed that on the basis of present New York curb market quotations it would be worth about $100,000,000, but said it would be difficult to sell the entire stock of 2,000,000 shares on the curb.

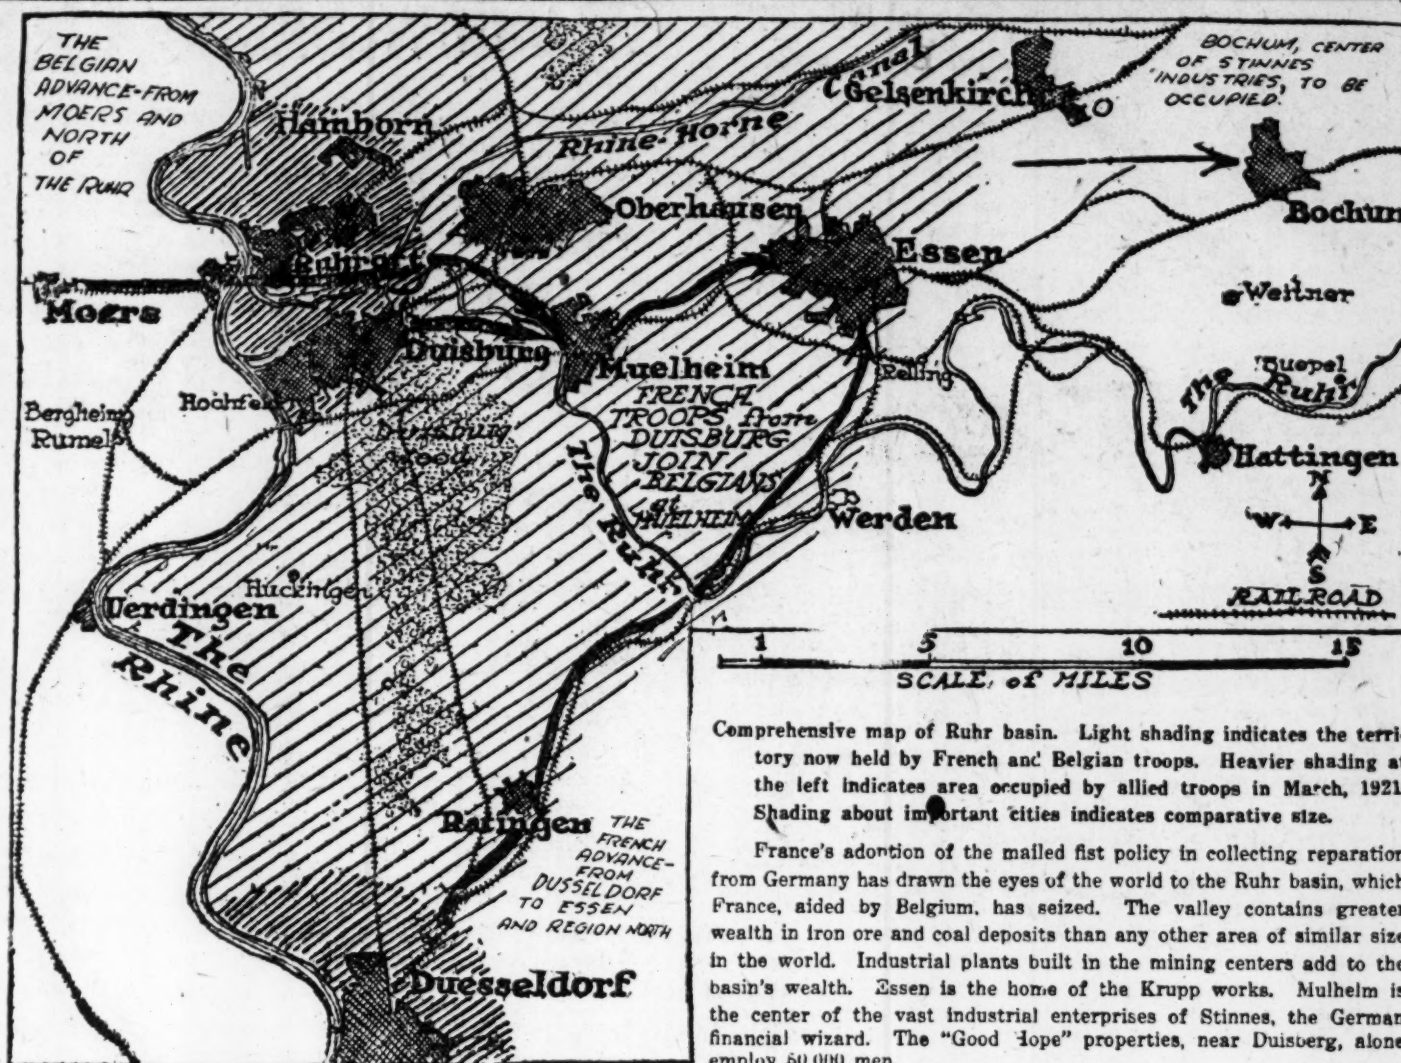

Inquiry Brings Clash.
An attempt by Mr. Roe to trace the disposition by Mr. Sinclair of this Mammoth stock through the Hyva corporation led to the clash regarding the records of the corporation.

Yesterday Mr. Sinclair expressed doubt as to the authority of the committee to inquire into the affairs of what he described as a private corporation. When Mr. Roe again took up the Hyva concern today the witness said he would prefer not to answer the questions without his records.

Attorney Roe's questions were met generally with the answer, "I don't know." The attorney finally after consultation with Chairman La Follette asked:

"Will you submit to the committee the articles of incorporation and by-laws of your corporation, the records of the board of directors' meetings, and such ledgers and other

Where France Is Using Mailed Fist

Comprehensive map of Ruhr basin. Light shading indicates the territory now held by French and Belgian troops. Heavier shading at the left indicates area occupied by allied troops in March, 1921. Shading about important cities indicates comparative size.

France's adoption of the mailed fist policy in collecting reparation from Germany has drawn the eyes of the world to the Ruhr basin, which France, aided by Belgium, has seized. The valley contains greater wealth in iron ore and coal deposits than any other area of similar size in the world. Industrial plants built in the mining centers add to the basin's wealth. Essen is the home of the Krupp works. Muelheim is the center of the vast industrial enterprises of Stinnes, the German financial wizard. The "Good Hope" properties, near Duisburg, alone employ 50,000 men.

HERRIN JURY FAILS TO REACH VERDICT

After More Than Nine Hours of Deliberation,
Body Is Locked Up for Night.

Marion, Ill., January 18.—(By the Associated Press.)—The jury of William county farmers, into whose hands the fate of five men charged with the murder of Howard Hoffman, one of the victims of the Herrin riots, was given shortly before noon today, continued their deliberations tonight without being able to arrive at any verdict.

At 9:30 o'clock Judge Hartwell announced that he had ordered the jurors locked up for the night and went home. He said he would be ready to receive a verdict at 9 a. m. tomorrow if the jury reached any decision.

One report during the afternoon was that the jurors stood 10 to 2 for conviction; that it also stood 10 to 2 for acquittal. Another placed the count at 7 to 5 for acquittal. No grounds could be found for either rumor, attorneys and court attaches professing ignorance of the progress of the deliberations.

Under the instructions given by Judge D. T. Hartwell the jury will return separate verdicts for each of the defendants and may find one guilty and another innocent. At the same time the jury will fix the punishment, if any, ranging from death to fourteen years imprisonment.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF GRIFFIN AUTO VICTIM IS HELD

Griffin, Ga., January 18.—(Special.)—The funeral of little Mary Kathleen Wallace, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Logan Wallace, was held this morning at 11 o'clock at the home of J. E. Drake. The child was the victim of a tragic automobile accident the other day when the bicycle she was riding collided with an automobile truck driven by Arthur Harris, a negro.

Dr. Leon M. Latimer and J. Marion Stafford performed the ceremonies, after which interment was made at Oak Hill cemetery.

MOULTRIE WOMAN FATALLY BURNED SAVING FURNITURE

Moultrie, Ga., January 18.—(Special.)—Mrs. J. H. Hester died at a local hospital today as the result of burns that she received while trying to save some of her household goods from her home when it caught on fire. She succeeded in carrying out a few things and then ventured into the burning house a second time, on her way out she stumbled and fell, her foot becoming entangled in some way and she was unable to release herself. It was believed that Mrs. Hester would recover until just a short time before her death when complications set in. She is survived by her husband and three children. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon.

The
Written 15,000
Mile Guarantee
Is Continued!

THE smooth-running, Oakland Six engine continues to carry for 1923 the written 15,000 mile performance guarantee!

Conclusive proof that the Oakland engine merits this unusual guarantee is found in the fact that during 1922 it cost Oakland less than a cent per car to make good the very liberal terms of this special warranty.

This same superior quality is found throughout the Oakland chassis. It is responsible for Oakland's unusually long mileage records—free from trouble, repair, or expense. Compare the Oakland—and you will buy it.

SAY "BAYER" when you buy Aspirin

Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer product prescribed by physicians over twenty-two years and proved safe by millions for colds, headache, toothache, earache, neuralgia, lumbago, rheumatism, neuritis, and for pains in general. Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proper directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Drugs also sell bottles of 24 and 100. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacid, dextro of Salicylicacid.

business books as are kept, which will show the transactions of the Hyva corporation down to the present time and commencing at the date of its organization."

Mr. Sinclair hesitated and Chairman La Follette broke in:

"Will you produce the records and books called for?"

"I will discuss the matter with my counsel and let you know a little later," replied Mr. Sinclair sharply.

"You will consult with your counsel and answer when you have time," directed Chairman La Follette with some heat. "We have a way of obtaining those records if you do not wish to produce them."

Mr. Sinclair and his attorneys then left the committee room and the committee was announced as in recess. The oil man and his counsel left for the purpose, it was said, of preparing a statement answering the committee demand.

Sends for Subpoena.

Two hours passed and Mr. Sinclair did not return. Meantime Chairman La Follette sent for Sergeant-at-Arms Barry and bank subpoenas. About 15 minutes before 5 o'clock Senator La Follette announced that inasmuch as the witness had not returned the session would stand adjourned until tomorrow. He then directed the clerk of the subpoena for all the records of the Hyva corporation.

Chairman La Follette had scarcely left the committee room when Mr. Sinclair returned, prepared to present his statement. Finding the committee had adjourned he directed one of Largest Stockholder.

"In reference to the question of your question, I will answer that the Hyva corporation is organized under the laws of Delaware and is owned 50 per cent by myself, 9 per cent by my wife and 1 per cent by my mother. It is not engaged in the production or sale of oil or gas or any of the by-products thereof. It is not engaged in interstate commerce in any manner whatever. Its operations have been confined to the purchase, sale and exchange of securities."

"The record in this investigation shows that the Hyva corporation issued 80,000 shares of its common stock for 1,000,000 'A' shares and 1,500 'B' shares of the Mammoth Oil company. It also bought 191,200 additional 'A' shares. I stand willing and ready to furnish you with all of the records of the Hyva corporation pertaining in any way to the disposition of whatever part of the Mammoth Oil company's stock that has been disposed of by the Hyva corporation, and also showing the number of shares of Mammoth Oil company stock owned or controlled by, or which it holds in trust for others, if any. I also am willing to furnish you with all records of the Hyva corporation showing who stock it owns at this time in the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation, or in any other oil company or corporation. Further, I am not willing to produce the records of the Hyva corporation that pertain to other matters not pertinent to the subject under inquiry."

Accepts Subpoena.

The action of Mr. Sinclair in denying the right of the committee to records which he contends do not bear on the subject matter under investigation led to a search of the statute books, the revised statutes and of records of precedents for information as to the course the committee may pursue in case Mr. Sinclair on Monday maintains his stand and refuses to submit the records.

The revised statutes provide that any person summoned "as a witness by the authority of either house of congress to give testimony or to produce papers upon any matter under inquiry before either house or any committee of either house or congress who wilfully makes default," may be fined not more than $1,000 nor less than $100 and imprisoned not less than a month nor more than 12 months.

The procedure in case of default is that the committee shall report to the senate and that the president of the senate shall certify the fact to the district attorney of the District of Columbia who shall bring the matter before the grand jury for action.

Few precedents exist and in one senate attaches recalled the fact that a defaulting witness was placed in jail but later recovered $20,000 as damages in the courts.

"Pay Day" Giant Dredge Digging New Course for Peachtree Creek

Change Will Stop Periodic Overflows, and Reclaim Valuable Land

Above, left, a stretch of two hundred feet of the new Peachtree creek channel, photographed from the stern of "Pay Day" by Francis E. Price. Ira C. Hawkes, dredgerman, is preparing to ship a load of coal in his punt. Above, right, is the crane and a huge steam shovel protruding from the front of the dredge. It is big enough to hold the entire crew whose members are seen standing on it. Below is a map showing the old and crooked channel of Peachtree creek, together with the new channel which the dredging operations will bring about. The square in the center of the map fronting on Hemphill avenue is land lot 145 in which is located the 106 acres of city-owned property. On this is located the Atlanta disposal plant. The city property lies in that part of the land lot south of the old channel of the creek except for a strip at the eastern side of the land lot. Land on the northern side of the creek and on the eastern edge of the land lot is owned by private citizens. The dredging operations, it is declared, will clear the city-owned property from inundation from the creek, and it is proposed to locate the municipal air landing field there. The map was prepared for The Constitution in the office of the city's chief of construction. Photos by Francis E. Price, staff photographer.

The waste land around the city disposal plant on Hemphill road will be left high and dry when the channel is finished and its level expense, city authorities stated Thursday, will be offset by the postoffice department as a landing field for the air mail service. Aviation experts are to inspect the field this week, and unless it should develop that it harbors "air pockets" or something on its level bottom the field will probably be accepted as a station for the United States air mail.

The new channel is expected to relieve what little is left of the mosquito nuisance in that section of the county. In years gone by the sluggish current, with its frequent overflows which left pools of stagnant water for hundreds of feet from the banks, was a prolific hatching of the stinging, stinging pests of darkness. It is said that a detachment of Sherman's forces bivouacked along the creek one night in the '30s and delayed for several hours in an important movement by the singing of the Peachtree creek mosquitoes, which the soldiers thought was the hum of machine guns. Since then the nuisance has been largely abated, and with the new channel it will be no more.

Course Is Charted.

The course of the good ship "Pay Day" was charted by city and county engineers and surveyors of the Morris Construction company, owner of a fleet of dredges. It strikes straight down into the lowlands between the two exclusive drives of northern Fulton county, running with only five bends through trees and pastures, and everything else.

The great iron jaws of the scoop, powered by a 60-horse power steam engine in "Pay Day's" stern, crunch down into the moist earth and chew off great mouthfuls weighing more than a ton and a half and measuring more than a cubic yard. Small stumps and trees are just so much salt and pepper to "Pay Day's" palate.

F. M. Porter acts as chief for the vessel's daily ration of 900 mouthfuls of Fulton county. He works ahead of the dredge with dynamite, blowing up stumps that might give his only cash customer the tummy-ache if gobbled whole. Other members of the crew are Turner Conger, foreman; Ira C. Hawkes, dredgerman; W. S. Ails, crane-man, and F. L. Hale, runner.

The newly dug channel is kept from filling up with sand by two enterprises that operate in conjunction with construction companies. They have pipe lines running into the creek through which powerful pumps suck loose sand that drifts down the stream. As much as 300 cubic yards of sand, weighing more than that many hundred tons, are sucked out of the foundations and the north of Atlanta's new homes and business blocks. This daily harvest of sand is the erosion that deposits the sand in the waters of the creek will continue until the Blue Ridge mountains are worn away. That will be some little time yet, it is stated on good authority.

ROOKIE REJECTED WHEN HE TALKS IN HIS SLEEP

The habit of talking in his sleep caused a prospective army recruit to be rejected at Fort McPherson Thursday.

Arriving from Greenville, S. C., he applied at the recruiting office for examination. He passed the physical tests but was sent to quarters for further observation.

That night as he tossed on his army cot, he moaned "Sergeant, Sergeant, you'll let me join the army, won't you? You're not going to send me back to Greenville, are you?"

The next morning he was given transportation back to his home. "Quit talking in your sleep if you want to join the army," the medical officer said.

Denishawn Dancers Come to Auditorium On Thursday Night

The Denishawn Dancers, headed by Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, world famous interpreters of the art of terpsichore, will give a performance at the City Auditorium Thursday night. This is one of the regular attractions of the civic concert series, sponsored by the Atlanta Music club.

The many Atlantans who saw the Denishawn dancers here two or three seasons ago will recall their artistic and delightful presentation, although on that occasion Miss St. Denis and Ted Shawn were unable to appear with them. The two noted stars, however, will head the company this season. The company includes, in addition to Miss St. Denis and Mr. Shawn, a group of famous dancers especially selected.

The company will give a matinee performance Thursday afternoon, with a program especially selected to attract children.

In order that she may obtain funds with which to complete her art studies, Baroness Vera Nikolic, of Zagreb, Jugoslavia, has taken up the pursuit of brickmaking.

AUTOIST SLIGHTLY HURT IN SCHOOL TRUCK ACCIDENT

James White, of 74 Hood street, driver of the roadster which collided with a Fort McPherson school truck Thursday morning, was only slightly injured, it was declared last night by authorities at the army post. Reports that the driver was perhaps fatally hurt were said to be unfounded.

White received a deep cut on his forehead and other bruises. The accident happened at Lee street and Avon avenue. The truck was loaded with 58 school children enroute from Fort McPherson to Oakland City school. None of them was injured.

A case of reckless driving was made against W. G. Sherman, driver of the truck. It is expected that it will be called for trial Friday morning by Recorder Johnson.

WILSONIANS RAP FRENCH INVASION

See Blow to Hopes for Better World Conditions Built on the Versailles Treaty.

BY ROBERT J. BENDER.

Washington, January 18.—It is the belief of Woodrow Wilson's friends that French invasion of the Ruhr is the greatest if not the knockout blow to hopes for a better world order built upon the peace of Versailles.

Instead of tranquility and a spirit of democracy growing out of the world war, they point to these present-day facts:

1. A spirit of hatred and revenge has developed in central Europe and actual fighting has occurred in several states.
2. The Turks have thrown the treaty of Sevres in the faces of the allies and today finds the latter virtually pleading with the former to sign something that will mean peace in the Near East.
3. In Italy, through the rise of fascism, there has developed a dictatorship, unmatched by any existing monarchy.
4. The French have taken to enforcing the treaty of peace with Germany through force of arms, as a result of which the Germans have declared its provisions null and void and the French, according to German interpretation, also have violated treaty terms.
5. There is grave danger of Germany disintegrating, of a possible revolution and of chaos.

Fear Russian Alliance.

In the existing situation, there is more fear of a general economic collapse than there is of actual war. Authorities generally, and they are supported by the opinion of well-informed Russians, declare that soviet Russia will enter into an economic alliance with Germany now but she will never enter into a military alliance unless there is a revolution in Germany. And such an alliance between Russia and Germany would be the only means by which Germany could wage out and out war upon the invading French. There might be guerrilla fighting, and this is looked for, but so far as hostilities on a great scale are concerned, they are not expected in any quarter because Germany has neither the money nor the supplies with which to undertake such a contest alone.

The big thing, as authorities view it, is that what was intended as a "great peace" has little by little been shattered by the different forces in Europe and now has been virtually wrecked through the great hatred that is certain to result from the French blows at German industry.

MRS. SUSAN YOUNG, 97 YEARS OF AGE, DIES IN EATONTON

Eatonton, Ga., January 18.—(Special.)—Mrs. Susan M. Young died at her home early this morning after a short illness. She was in her 97th year, and was in every way a most remarkable woman. She was a member of the Presbyterian church and greatly beloved by the entire community. She was the oldest citizen in this city and second oldest in the county.

She is survived by one son, Rev. Robert Adams, of South Carolina, and five daughters, Mrs. John Rivaia, of South Carolina; Mrs. Robert Young, Mrs. Sallie Young, Mrs. John W. Adams and Miss Nona Young, all of Eatonton, and one brother, Tom Meriwether, of Eatonton.

Chief Is Removed After Shooting Man Who Attacked Klansmen

Daytona, Fla., January 1.—Chief of Police Joseph Osborne was removed from office this morning by City Manager W. B. Hodges as a result of an altercation Tuesday night following a Ku Klux Klan parade when he shot former Policeman Charles Pent, after Pent and W. C. Perry had disrobed a couple of klansmen.

Neither Pent nor Perry has been arrested for the shooting and it is not expected they will be, as the men disrobed would have to appear in court and own up to membership in the order and to carrying concealed weapons.

Frank Plowman has been appointed acting chief of police.

O. R. C. Installs.

Cedarhurst, N. Y., January 18.—(Special.)—Officers of Cedar Valley division, No. 482, Order Railway Conductors, were installed here last night by Mr. W. M. Hamilton, of Macon, general chairman. The officers installed were: J. W. Ruff, chief conductor; G. P. Simerville, assistant chief conductor; W. J. Foster, secretary and treasurer; T. F. Thompson, senior conductor; J. A. Lott, junior conductor; J. L. Low, inside sentinel; W. A. Green, outside sentinel; C. B. Chapman, marshal. Following installation the members with their families had a banquet at the Palace tea room.

TWO AGED MILTON COUNTY SISTERS BURIED TOGETHER

Alpharetta, Ga., January 18.—(Special.)—The funeral of Miss Lizzie Pace, 88 years of age, and of her sister, Miss Sarah Pace, 81 years of age, was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Bethlehem Methodist church, Rev. Jesse Warwick officiating.

The deaths of these sisters occurred within a few hours of each other, and they were buried in the same coffin. They were widely known and highly esteemed in this section. Their brother, W. S. Pace, was a candidate in the primary of last year for representative in the legislature from this county.

1922 RECORD BUILDING YEAR, REPORT SHOWS

New York, January 18.—Last year proved a record building year for the United States, the census bureau announced today, publishing reports from 164 cities throughout the country showing a construction cost total of $2,514,435,407.

The 32 per cent greater than the 1921 total, which represented the country's record to that time. It was 76 per cent greater than in 1920, 31 per cent in excess of 1919, and nearly 15 per cent above the record in the last war year, 1918.

Greater New York reported nearly one-fourth the country's entire construction.

Chicago Opposed To Retaining Klan Members on Pay Roll

Chicago, January 18.—By a vote of 36 to 2, the city council was asked to order today as opposed to retaining members of the Ku Klux Klan on the city pay roll.

The vote was taken yesterday when the city council was asked to order the suspension of William H. Green, a city fireman and an alleged member of the Klan.

Green recently had been questioned by an alderman investigating a committee regarding his alleged connections with the organization. At that time he declared he had resigned from the Klan. He will face trial before the city civil service commission January 26.

Robert J. Mulcahy, alderman acting as chairman of the council's committee, declared during the session that the police had threatened his life for his activities against the secret order. He said he would divulge the facts later.

John P. Garner, one of the dissenting aldermen, referred to alleged Klan activities in Morehouse parish, Louisiana.

A friend of mine who just came back from Louisiana tells me that he met Skipwith and Dr. McKoin and that they are a fine lot of people," Alderman Garner said. "The whole trouble down there is politics."

Skipwith is the cyclops of the Klan in Morehouse parish, and Dr. McKoin, alleged Klan leader, went back to Louisiana after he recently was charged with murder.

Negroes Would Avert Exodus of Race From Alabama

Birmingham, Ala., January 18.—Pointing out a steady stream of negroes leaving the south, a committee composed of ten leaders of the race today petitioned the Birmingham city commission and through it the legislature of Alabama to go slow in passing a so-called "zoning law" which is now being drafted for introduction at this session of the assembly. The delegation asked that the segregation clause be omitted from the bill.

DR. J. H. MONCRIEF DIES IN GREENSBORO

Greensboro, Ga., January 18.—(Special.)—Dr. J. H. Moncrief, well-known Greensboro citizen and prominent dentist, died at his home here Thursday morning. Dr. Moncrief had been ill with influenza for a week and his passing is unusually sad in that his wife is ill with the dreaded disease.

Dr. Moncrief was a member of the Baptist church. He was married twice. His second wife, who survives him, was Miss Maime Williams, of Atlanta.

The funeral will be conducted at the Greensboro Baptist church Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment will be in the city cemetery.

BLAZE AT WHITE HOUSE QUICKLY EXTINGUISHED

Washington, January 18.—A flurry of excitement was caused at the white house late today when a chimney caught fire. Flames shot into the air, but before door keepers and attendants who rushed to the roof could reach the blaze it had subsided.

MALES LEAD SUICIDE LIST IN NEW YORK

New York, January 18.—Of the 330 persons who killed themselves in New York last year, 289 were males and 253 females, according to the annual report of Chief Medical Examiner Norris. Married folks were in the majority, 315 marriages men and 141 married women taking their own lives.

Airmen Break Record In Trip From Dayton To New York City

New York, January 18.—Lieutenant Alex Pearson and Bradley Jones today broke the time record for an airplane flight between Dayton and New York, landing at Mitchell field, Long Island, at 4:20 p. m., unofficial time, making the distance in four hours and three minutes. The record was four hours and 30 minutes.

$500,000 BONDS SENT TO NAPIER

sent Abner Lee Squiggins $800 in Confederate currency as payment for the bonds, as specified in the face of the security?

Now, it seems, everyone in the United States of America who possesses old securities issued by Georgia during the confederacy, and for which payment is called for in Confederate money, has read those two stories and is sending in his bonds for collection.

Half a million dollars' worth of these demands reached the attorney general's office Thursday.

Mrs. J. N. Ray, of Haworth, N. J. writes that she has a bond and would like to collect on it.

Edgar Freeman, of Huntington, W. Va., has $300,000 worth, issued as security for loan money to the state during the war days of the sixties by President Cuyler, of the Georgia railroad. Mr. Freeman states in his letter that he holds state bonds in this amount and would like to collect, presumably with interest.

Fred H. Beavers, of New York city, also read the stories. He has a bond for $1,000, issued in 1876 long after the war, by the Bullwhacker administration, commonly known in Georgia as the "carpetbag administration."

None of these interested parties mention the fact that the first bond, that held by Mr. Squiggins, was paid in Confederate currency. It is to be hoped that there are no high hopes of payment for these long-outlawed obligations in money of today.

Anyway, the attorney-general wants to call a halt in the matter. Once interesting and amusing; now, it is getting to be monotonous, and soon it will be a serious burden upon his office force.

FRENCH DEPUTIES CLASH AT SESSION

tional history for three-quarters of an hour.

A conservative member looked over at Cachin and accused him of "cowardice" because the latter went into the Ruhr to organize the communists to resist France's invasion.

"Couchon! Sale Couchon!" retorted Cachin.

A congressman from Podank might be able to sell that right out in the house of representatives at Washington and get away with it—but not so in France.

Resent Insult.

The translation is "Pig! Dirty pig!" This would scarcely be considered a compliment in America but in France it's about the nastiest crack one can take at a person.

When the republicans, royalists, conservatives mobilized against Cachin, in socialists and communists started to turn toward the president's rostrum to protest.

Prince Enters Battle.

The prince started to fight with Vaillant-Couturier, communist. The latter didn't want to fight; so they wrestled.

During the finance minister, who is an amateur boxer, went about the chamber distributing the latest in scientific uppers.

Henri Pate, director of physical education, refereed several fights, and then went over and separated Murat and Vaillant-Couturier.

Murat, who defended "Blue-Blues" Landru, turned pacifist and appealed for peace. But he was just about as successful in this endeavor as he was when he appealed to the court some months ago to save the life of Landru.

After the fray, the deputies took time out to regain their wind and then came back and voted.

DEBT DISCUSSIONS TO BE RESUMED

of the British mission departed for New York. They will sail for home Saturday, arriving on Friday of next week. It was stated that Mr. Baldwin expected to confer with the cabinet on the day following and that the negotiations would be resumed through the British embassy during the week beginning January 28.

Final Session Short.

The final session of the commissions lasted a little more than an hour and a half, but it was of a more or less perfunctory character.

Details as to the various suggestions that have been put forth during the conversations of the commissions which have extended over the past ten days still were withheld. It was learned, however, that the British government regarded an interest rate of 3 per cent as fair and equitable, while the Americans presented arguments in favor of a rate somewhat higher, but at the same time well below the 4 1/4 per cent fixed in the debt-refunding law.

It was stated that from the first of the discussions the five American commissioners, Secretaries Mellon, Hughes and Hoover and Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, and Representative Burton, republican, Ohio, had been in full agreement as to the American viewpoint. Likewise, there was no division of opinion between the two British delegates, Mr. Baldwin, and Montagu C. Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

In declining to discuss details of the various suggestions for a settlement put forward at the joint meetings, the commissioners said these had been of only the most tentative form and that their public discussion at this time might prove embarrassing to the future negotiations.

McGRAW RELATES INTERESTING VARNIS OF BASEBALL

Young Stribling Wins Decision Over George Shade

Veteran of Flynn's Stables

Is Decisively Outclassed By Flashy Macon Youth

Admits Victor Is Good Enough to Fight His Brother; Macon Goes Wild.

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

Macon, Ga., January 18.—(Special.)—George Shade, a middleweight good enough to rate matches and win them against the fighters of his poundage who are keeping Champion Johnny Wilson from slumbering sweetly, walked into the greatest surprise of his fistic career when he was thoroughly thrashed through ten rounds by Young Stribling, a lad of 18 summers, at the Macon Auditorium to-night.

Shade admits defeat, wherein he differs from other eastern fighters who are wont to southern opposition by managers who ought to know better than to send their pugs down here in poor physical condition to meet supposedly easy opposition.

Credits Stribling.
"I have fought more than 100 middleweights," he told this correspondent while the boys in the dressing room were removing signs of the combat, "but this Stribling is the fastest piece of plunder I ever ran across. Sure I was defeated. That guy is fast enough to fight my brother, Dave, who is generally regarded as a pretty swift mover."

Naturally Macon is going through a season of the wildest enthusiasm imaginable as these lines are being sent to the standard newspaper of the south. The town has a right to feel proud of its young pugilist. He has improved wonderfully since Atlanta saw him in a tame exhibition against Larry Ayers at the ball park.

There is ring class written all over the kid. The trench warfare that was once charged to Stribling has been tossed away in recent months and he is willing and anxious to fight every minute of every round. He stands toe to toe and slugs now, and it is invariably the enemy that breaks before the first barrage launched by the young Maconian.

A crowd that netted close to $4,000 turned out for the festivities. Stribling apparently made up his mind that he would not disappoint the patriotic fans who had turned out in fear and trembling to watch him face the sternest opposition in his short career.

Starts Offensive.
He went after Shade in the first round and kept plugging all the way. It took the visiting ringman possibly a couple of rounds to realize that he had grabbed a tartar, and his fight from that point was extremely cautious. Stribling tried long range stuff, and when Shade showed little inclination to mix it in this fashion his younger opponent changed tactics and hurt Shade with unflinching.

Stribling's best weapon was his left. He has lost none of the old 24-Hour Service

GIRLS' TEAMS CLASH TODAY

The second round of the girls' prep basketball league will get under way this afternoon when the Locust Grove girls meet the Marietta High girls at the Decatur court and the Fulton High girls meet the Marietta on the Cobb county court.

As a feature attraction for the second round, the High and Marietta will furnish the afternoon's entertainment, but it is unfortunate that the game could not be played at the Auditorium. Fulton-Marietta girls' basketball games have jammed all the seating and standing capacity and the game this afternoon will be a repetition of past performances.

As yet the Marietta High girls have not made an appearance in prep circles this season and they have a chance to make their bow on a home court against an ancient rival.

Fulton High has played one game and that was dropped to the Decatur lassies last Friday afternoon in a very close game. Fulton High has been active in this week in an effort to smooth out all of the rough places that showed up last week.

Reports from Fulton are to the effect that they are ready for the game with Marietta this afternoon.

The Locust Grove-Decatur High game should be another real typical girls' battle for Decatur is determined to make a better showing this afternoon than was exhibited in the victory over Fulton last week.

CO-EDS FORM BASKET TEAM
The third was time until Stribling opened up with an assault that made Shade give ground. Stribling was watching for a place to put his left, and finally found it, the force of the blow driving Shade to the ropes. It was the nearest approach to a knockdown that was presented the fans.

Stribling here showed a new stunt that's going to worry many enemies from this time out. He comes in with a movement that smacks of the old "shell" we used to hold against the kid, but behind the cover lurks a deadly left. It was this maneuver that opened Shade for the punch that almost put him out of the battle, and he was caught time after time by the same trick.

Shade Tired.
Shade's lip was cut in the fourth and he was tired at the close. The fifth was his worst round. Stribling shooting rights and lefts to the face from the start. The visitor was volubly as he went to his corner. In some manner he regained considerable strength in the rest period and weathered the attack in the sixth in fine fashion.

Shade Loses Seventh.
He took another bad pasting in the seventh, but rallied to such an extent in the eighth that he was given a draw by ringside critics. It was his best round. The ninth was a dull affair, but Stribling uncorked some heavy wallops in the tenth and Shade looked relieved when the bell ended the bout.

There was small prospect of a knockout from the start. It was seen early in the action that the superb condition of the young Maconian would enable him to stand the stiffest sort of jolts from the visitor. And Shade, despite the fact that he was very fat, was too rugged and too smart to go down for the long count. Stribling lost no time, once the fight was under way. The first minute of the opening round he spent cautiously, as Shade advanced, he noticed that the visitor was no desire to let Shade try his punches so early in the fray.

TENN. SAVES SUNDAY BALL
Nashville, Tenn., January 18.—The bill prohibiting the playing of Sunday baseball in Tennessee was defeated in the state senate today by a vote of 16 to 10.

Just after the halfway mark, however, Stribling took the bull by the horns and bored in. He flayed Shade's mid-section with a series of hard rights and lefts and came within a right to the jaw that made the visitor wonder if the kid could keep it up throughout the engagement. Shade looked worried as he went back to his corner and it was Stribling's round easily.

Preliminaries Enjoyed.
The preliminaries were thoroughly enjoyed by the spectators. In the opener, Bob Gibson, a youngster picked up and developed by Dan Chappell, prominent attorney of Americus, Ga., scored a knockout over Tony Poppelle in the second round. Gibson looks to be a comer and can sock effectively.

Harry Allen and Johnny Helms staged a slashing eight round affair. Allen getting the decision given by Lattie Tenner, Atlanta fighter president to service as referee by "Pat" Stribling. Lattie might have called it a draw, but nobody seemed to notice the little injustice that was probably done Helms.

Flahive Wins.
Hoody Flahive and Jordan Shepard went through ten tame rounds, Flahive winning without any trouble. He really showed with stopped Shepard. Blackie Erdis, who was the Kid Joiner, slugger, failed to show up and a newcomer, Brenner by name, was shoved in. Brenner lasted exactly 45 seconds, going down when Joiner smashed through a left to the jaw.

Ed Alexander, a police lieutenant of Savannah, was referee and his work was splendid. Abe Abrams was nominated as the world's best announcer and we have in mind our very good friend, Fatty Elrod, when we do so. Many Atlanta sportsmen were present. Among them were: Max Tenner and scores of others. H. G. Lansdale, of the Patterson Lumber Co., forgot business long enough to come down to Macon for the festivities and found a landing place in the press coop.

The fights here are staged under the auspices of the American Legion and these boys know how to entertain. They were greatly pleased at the financial success of the big undertaking, but more than all these ex-service men are pleased at the work of their ring idol. We believe the kid deserves lots of credit.

HEPBRON HONORED DINNER GUEST AT A. A. C.
The dinner given by the Atlanta Athletic club last night for George T. Hepbron, secretary of the joint committee, was a most enjoyable and instructive affair. Gathered to meet Mr. Hepbron were the leaders of athletics in Atlanta and vicinity.

Mr. Hepbron was the principal speaker in a most instructive manner. He told of his early connection with the Warren Athletic club in Washington, D. C., and the beginnings of the A. A. C.

Then he spoke of the development of the A. A. C. to the present time and its importance to athletics in general. Mr. Hepbron forcefully brought to mind the importance of athletic training for the youths who participate. No longer are athletics and education isolated from one another. Athletics have now become a part of education.

"Witness the fact," he said, "that coaches of athletic teams are now employed for the whole year and have seats in the faculty. They are accredited faculty members in good standing."

The proper development for the high school athletic was a matter of general interest brought out by Mr. Hepbron. A boy who gets the right start in high school will hold to his early training in his college years, while the high school youth started wrong, never recovers.

"There is the great plea for amateurism. Keep the sports clean by maintaining an amateur status. Get the professional idea out of the minds of high school and college men and much is accomplished towards keeping the plane of athletics high. The work on

Atlanta Athletic Club Set for Mercer Battle

Game at Auditorium To-night Promises to Be One of the Bitterest in Team's History.

BY JOHN STATON.
Mercer versus the Atlanta Athletic club tonight at the Auditorium. Popular prices prevail. What could be sweeter? Atlanta tonight will have the opportunity of seeing two flash teams in action, of seeing the great Mercer defeated by the Atlanta Athletic club.

This game tonight will be a big affair from going to go. The Atlanta Athletic club, needless to say, has not suffered a defeat this season. Mercer has fared somewhat worse, but have never been touched since they hit their stride some three or four weeks ago.

Prior to that time they were defeated by the Walsh club, champion of the country last season, and the Albany "Y."

Passing Clever.
The criterion of the Atlanta Athletic club is teamwork. They can find each other on the court intuitively. They can pass a ball in every conceivable direction and manner. And they can shoot with a lightning-like speed which they are able to maintain throughout the entire forty minutes of play.

Mercer, though developing pass work to a marked degree, relies more on the quick ability of George Harmon to get possession of the ball and carry it into the danger zone, there to surround the defense.

Mercer has played so far, he has been the outstanding player, both offensively and defensively. On his team, however, are four other men of known worth and reliability. Under the able tutelage of Josh Cody, Mercer has developed probably the ablest basketball quintet to the south.

Test De Luxe.
The Athletic club will of course be the test de luxe. If they should be some chance weather the storm it would take something smarter than the average college basketball team to beat them. But a game like the one tonight at all hazards will prove of great benefit to the Macon boys.

This game marks the beginning of one of the most comprehensive road trips ever undertaken by a southern university. It begins in Atlanta to-morrow night and ends in Philadelphia with a game at the University of Pennsylvania about ten days later. Seven games are to be played, five south of the Mason and Dixon line, and two north.

Home Exercises in Swedish Gymnastics
ARRANGED BY LUCY MARVIN ADAMS
Director Health Education
Atlanta Y. W. C. A.

Any bodily movement, even when taken at random, may be called exercise. No one can deny that the busy housekeeper who has prepared three meals, made beds, swept, dusted and polished, and taken on the fastidious and children has had a day full of exercise. Then why advocate gymnastics for her?

The person who asks that question is failing to distinguish between exercise at random and systematic exercise which we term gymnastics or physical training whose object is to develop and preserve physical power.

The primary aim of gymnastics is health. And never since the days before the glory of Greece was dimmed has the world placed such a premium on health. The Greeks devoted their attention to the strong, leaving the weak to perish; we care tenderly for the weak and left the strong to perish.

But the pendulum swings; the old order changes. We are fast learning that hygienic exercises, worked out along physiological principles, are the necessary part of our day if we would give to our work 100 per cent efficiency.

It is hoped that these lessons will meet that end for our readers.

Stride Position.—From correct standing position place left foot one-half step to left side. Right foot to right side. Bring left foot to original position. Same right.

Head Circumduction.—Drop head forward, slowly turn to left, backward, to right and forward so that a rotary movement is described. (5.)

Arch Flexion From Close Standing Position.—Close feet, toes and heels. Bend trunk very slightly backward. Stretch upward to position. (10.)

Double Arm Extension Forward.—Stand with feet apart, arms extended forward, chest, stretch arms forward. (20 times.)

Leg Elevation Backward.—Place hands on hips. Lift left leg backward, knee to chest, back to position. Same right. (20 times each way.)

Double Arm Rotation.—Lift both arms to shoulder level, palms down. Describe small circles with hands, arms rotating from shoulders. (20.)

Alternate Leg Elevation.—Lie on back on floor. Lift left leg high, knee to chest, back to place, same right. (10 each way.)

Trunk Flexion Sideways.—Place hands on hips. Bend trunk slowly to left, knee to chest, back to position. Repeat right.

Double Leg Elevation.—Place hands on hips. Lift both heels high. Sink, holding in position. (10.)

Double Arm Lift.—Begin by making time, left, right in ordinary march time. Gradually rise on toes, increasing speed until rapid motion is attained. (10.)

Deep Breathing.—Stand in front of an open window. Lift heels and inhale. Sink heels and exhale.

MERCER IS READY FOR HARD TRIP.
Macon, Ga., January 18.—(Special.) Mercer concluded practice this afternoon for the long eastern trip which begins Friday with the A. A. C. game in Atlanta. The following night Mercer again will face strong opposition in the Georgia Tech game.

In the final drill every member of the squad on hand appeared to be in excellent condition. The men engaged in only light shooting practice, scrimmage on the final day having been a "Y" practice.

Former Captain Smokey Harper, now playing his fourth year on the Mercer quint as standing guard, will not be able to make the trip with the Mercer team. That the club leader has been slightly ill and unable to attend practice. His absence from the squad decreases greatly the strength of the Orange and Black quint.

While Manly McWilliams has been doing excellent work at guard all season, Harper heretofore has been a tower of strength for the locals. Certainly his illness has cost the Codmen a large percentage of the reserve strength.

The First Game.
In meeting the Atlanta Athletic club Mercer will face in its initial game on the road trip one of the strongest teams to be encountered on the foreign jaunt. That the club quint will defeat Mercer appears to be a foregone conclusion in the minds of Atlanta patrons of the game. Mercer does not expect to win this game but it is certain that the powerful A. A. C. will know that it has played a game when the contest is over.

Coch Coach and the following men will represent Mercer: Bob Gamble, George Harmon, B. L. Smith, Manly McWilliams, Ed Simmons, Tige Stone, King Dunn and Emmett Bass.

The schedule for the trip follows: January 19, A. A. C., in Atlanta. January 20, Tech, in Atlanta. January 21, Clemson, in Clemson. January 22, South Carolina, in South Carolina. January 23, North Carolina, in Chapel Hill. January 24, Tulane, in New Orleans. January 25, Princeton, in Princeton. January 26, University of Penn., in Philadelphia.

Boys' High vs. Tech High This afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the City Auditorium basketball court is the principal game on the third round of the prep basketball league. Tech High, the afternoon's performance at 2:30 o'clock with Marietta, and followed by G. M. A. and Commercial High at 3:30 o'clock, then the U. S. B. B. and Decatur High vs. U. S. B. B. at 5:30 o'clock.

The admission price to the quartet of games is only 25 cents, and certainly the Tech High-Boys' High game is worth the price. There is one ad- vantage in the game being played late, and that is many of the people who get off from work at 4:30 o'clock will have an opportunity of witnessing at least the last half.

Tech High has been working overtime this week in preparation for the game, and a defeat at the hands of Boys' High will practically eliminate Tech High from any claim whatever for the first half of the league race title. Captain Beck returned to the lineup last Saturday afternoon, but was in no condition to play. He is in good shape and will give his all this afternoon. Tech High has been beaten this season by University, and they are seeking revenge today.

Boys' High has run with in their two starts, and their scoring record is far above any of the others. The team, according to many that have seen it work, consider it the smoothest working prep basketball machine in the city. Their passing has been good and they are accurate in their throws.

In the guard positions Tech High has Whitten and Perry, a pair of fast forwards, but they lacked the ability to sink the ball in the hoops last season. Boys' High has O'Dwyer and Rankin, two clever forwards.

G. M. A. and Commercial should give the fans quite a little battle. Commercial, rated as a candidate for the cellar position by many, has risen nearer the top by a victory over the Fulton High five, and they will give G. M. A. a good game today.

Clark, by the good work in the game already played, are favored to win over the Fulton High team, since Fulton has yet to win a game.

The officials of this afternoon will be "E" Elrod and Jones. These men have worked the prep games so far this season, and have given them good service. They keep the game going at all times and help in keeping each game within its allotted time.

The Saturday game will start at 1:30 o'clock instead of 2:30 o'clock, as on Fridays.

Boca Class Wins.
The Boca class basketball team of the Gordon Street Presbyterian church, defeated the Inman Park Baptist team Tuesday night. The score was 24 to 5. Randolph and Duncan were in goal, while the Boca players were McDonald, Florence and Boswell starred for the Inman Park outfit. The game was played on the Boca class court.

Statz Is Golf Star.
Los Angeles, Cal., January 18.—Arnold Statz, outfielder of the Chicago National league baseball club, is proving himself almost as great a player with a golf club as with a baseball bat. In matches here Statz has defeated many of southern California's best amateur players and has broken a course record at the San Gabriel Country club with a 70. Had he not missed a three-foot putt on the last green, he would have tied the professional record for the course.

PITTS TIGER GRID MENTOR

Birmingham, Ala., January 18.—(Special.)—John E. Pitts, Gob Wilson and Douglas Roby will form the Auburn football coaching staff for the 1923 season. These men were named at a meeting of the faculty athletic committee Thursday morning.

Pitts will assume the title of chief football coach, with "Gob" Wilson, assistant the past year, and Doug Roby, former Michigan satellite, as his associates. Wilbur H. Hutsell was definitely appointed director of athletics at the Tiger institution and will continue to look after the basketball and track teams.

Many Auburn alumni and followers have been expecting the naming of Pitts for some time. Pitts was one of the greatest linemen ever turned out at Auburn. He has served as assistant coach of the Plainsmen since 1919 and much of the credit for the Tigers' success during the past few years has been accredited by Donahue to his aid. "Gob" Wilson, former Michigan all-American guard, is an excellent line coach, his work during the season being one of the reasons of the success of the Plainsmen forward defense. He has proven exceedingly popular with Auburn students and alumni.

Douglas Roby comes to Auburn with high recommendations from Fielding Yost, head football coach at Michigan. Roby was both a football and basketball luminary at the Wolverine school. He is expected to prove a big help in building up the 1923 Tiger backfield.

Since the resignation of Mike Donahue football critics have been speculating on his successor. Various and sundry predictions have been made. Those close to Auburn have felt all along, however, that Pitts would be chosen. In addition to his complete knowledge of football, Pitts has a great influence over the Auburn student body. It is doubtful if the Tiger authorities could have made a selection that would prove more popular with the Auburn undergraduates.

The stage of the public hall was decorated with flags and baseball emblems. All of our players were seated in a semi-circle facing the audience. The master of ceremonies sat in the middle of the congressman—the big punch of the meeting—at his right. We all tried our best to look dignified and important. McMahon and the other pitchers were grouped immediately behind me. I can see that picture to this day. And as I see the picture, all of us wore mustaches. That was the thing in baseball at that time. I had a big black one which looked very impressive—to me with my weight of 123 pounds. Robbie had a fancy one, very carefully twisted up at the ends.

After a few minutes the master of ceremonies introduced the congressman. We all got out for some big game stuff in the way of oratory.

"Ladies and gentlemen," began the congressman, "you are now looking upon the greatest collection of athletes that the world has ever known. They form what is known as the Baltimore Orioles, the greatest, most picturesque and most spectacular baseball club in history. They have honored us by coming here to break bread with our humble townfolk. We consider that more of an honor than they can understand. Little do you realize what this growth of an athletic game and the presence of its most noted exponents means to our coming young manhood (applause)."

"In my arduous duties at the national capitol it may be that you think that I have had no time to give to baseball. But you are wrong. I devote much time to it. I study it and I respect it. I appreciate it. I know what this collection of sterling athletes has done. I realize how they have won. These men, despite handicaps, have won a championship. The glory and wonder of that achievement, though, is what they have won with practically no money. They are all the worst pitchers in baseball!"

CROWD STUNNED THEN LAUGHED.
McMahon and Doc Pond, who had been leaning forward in anticipation of the climax, almost fell out of their chairs. The crowd was stunned for a moment and then broke out laughing.

The great orator did not know that the whole show was given in honor of McMahon. He had tried to bull his way through by reading the papers—Washington papers.

The show was a bust. The next election the congressman lost that county.

It was several seasons before we got through kidding our pitching staff about that speech.

And speaking of mistakes, I must tell you one on Wilbert Robinson. As I have said Robbie was always careful about his mustache having the snappy upward twist at the ends.

Tim Hurst, the umpire, who died some years ago, never thought much of mustaches. He shot many a witty crack at the players about these appendages. Tim, as you know, perhaps, never took any back talk from a player. If he did the player suffered in the consequent repartee.

One day Robbie was catching and there was a Boston runner on first. By a quick move Robbie shot the ball down to the bag and the runner, apparently, was blocked off the bag.

But Hurst did not call him out. He merely spread out his hands, indicating that the runner was safe. There was a big howl from the crowd.

What's the matter with you, Tim? Robbie demanded to know. "Are you blind? Why, I had that runner frozen off the bag. There wasn't a chance for him to get back. I tell you he was frozen off!"

"All right, Old Timer," said Tim in that cutting voice, at the same time reaching over and twisting Robbie's mustache, "we'll call it one more from the game. Now, let's go!"

HAD MORE FUN WITH UMPIRES.
For a moment Robbie was so dumfounded that he silently went on playing. But the further he went the madder he got. Back at the bench Tim started kidding him. But for us stopping him I think he would have killed Hurst if he had had a chance in the next two or three innings. It was weeks before he got over the indignation of having his mustache twisted—and by an umpire at that. To this day if anyone says anything about a runner being frozen off, Tim will start kidding me.

We had more fun with umpires in those days than we do now.

In Washington the games were always started at half past four in the afternoon so as to get the crowd from the various state departments. As a result of this we often ran into darkness and there were constant rows about the games being called.

Clarkson, I think it was, was pitching one day and Robbie catching. Jack Kerns was umpiring. Kerns would never call a game on account of the indignation of having his mustache twisted—and by an umpire at that. To this day if anyone says anything about a runner being frozen off, Tim will start kidding me.

We had more fun with umpires in those days than we do now.

The Work is Easy

It is not difficult to secure subscriptions and renewals for The Constitution, neither does the work lack dignity. The Constitution is truly "The South's Standard Newspaper." The highest class men and women in Georgia have held The Constitution in high esteem for more than fifty-five years.

The Constitution is looked upon as the source of reliable local, national and international news in every line of human interest. In addition to full Associated Press and United News service, it carries a daily woman's section, sports, financial, comics, unsurpassed. The Sunday Magazine alone is worth more than the weekly subscription price. Its advertising columns are filled with clean, dignified copy. The offerings of the cities' best merchants and the country's greatest manufacturers are to be found in every issue. You could offer no article for sale which is held in higher esteem. This is borne out by the last official statements of newspaper publishers, which show that The Constitution is delivered, by carrier, into 5,383 more homes in Atlanta than any other newspaper.

You can profit by becoming a member of The Constitution's "Help Yourself Club." Do it today. Remember, you will either get one of the big prizes, or be paid cash commissions. The work is easy and dignified. You need not neglect your regular work, and we will assist you in getting your votes, which will bring you the money or the automobiles.

Haverty-Grove Wedding Is Brilliant Home Event

Exquisite beauty and elegance marked the marriage of Miss Dorothy Haverty, lovely daughter of James Joseph Haverty, and Dr. Leon Woodfin Grove, which was one of the brilliant social events of the season taking place Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's father, "Villa Clara," in Peachtree road.

The impressive ceremony was performed by Father James Horton in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

The home was elaborately decorated with quantities of pink and white spray of orange blossoms, pink orchids, and valley lilies. The bride's only ornament was a platinum and diamond wrist watch, a gift of the groom.

Brilliant Reception.

A reception followed the ceremony, at which Mr. Haverty was assisted in entertaining by his daughters, Mrs. Clarence Haverty, Mrs. Robert Haverty, Mrs. Frank McLaughlin, Mrs. J. C. McMichael, of Garden City, Long Island, and Mrs. Thomas Martin of Tusculoo, Ala., sister of the groom.

Miss Haverty was lovely in a gown of apricot chiffon, beaded in pearls, with a corsage of Parma violets.

Mrs. McMichael wore an imported model of silver and turquoise chiffon over silver metal cloth. Her corsage was of Ophelia roses.

Mrs. McGaughey's gown was of blue chiffon combined with silver cloth, completing her costume was a corsage of pink roses and valley lilies.

Punch was served in the sun parlor, from a bowl embedded in varied colored garden flowers, smilax and fruit, and was presided over by Mrs. Boskin Pennington and Miss Frances Powell.

Mrs. Pennington's gown was fashioned of pink georgette and silver lace.

Miss Powell wore a frock of orchid chiffon, the round neck trimmed with a silver lace border.

Miss Mary Frances Cogle and Miss Lucy Candler, lovely debutantes, kept the bride's book. Miss Cogle was lovely in a gown of blue panne velvet beaded in crystals. Miss Candler's costume was a draped model of pink velvet.

Bridal Party.

The first to enter was Miss Katherine Haverty, the bridesmaid, who was lovely in a creation of flesh-colored chiffon veiling sky-blue satin. The skirt was fashioned with side panels of the chiffon, forming an uneven hemline and trimmed with silver lace. The tight-fitting waist reflected the round neckline and the only trimmings was a deep border of silver lace. Arranged artistically to her hair was a bandeau of metal flowers in the shades of pink, blue and silver, and her bouquet was a cascade of Columbia roses showered with lavender sweet peas and Parma violets, and tied with sky-blue tulle.

The matrons of honor were Mrs. Clement Evans and Mrs. George B. Raine, who were first to enter, followed by Mrs. Harold Cogle and Mrs. Morloch Sykes Euben. They wore gowns fashioned alike of orchid chiffon over sky-blue satin, the waists reflected the bateau neckline and were made without sleeves. Adorning the long full skirts were touches of silver lace and grilles of blue and lavender ribbons, fastened in front with a bowknot of silver lace, from which fell streamers of orchid and blue velvet ribbons. Completing these exquisite gowns were arm bouquets of Columbia roses and lavender sweet peas tied with blue tulle.

Miss May Haverty, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, wore a beautiful gown of orchid chiffon made over a foundation of sky-blue satin, and headed in large designs of pearls and crystals. She carried a shower bouquet of Columbia roses, showered with lavender sweet peas and Parma violets.

Frank Grove, of Mobile, Ala., acted as Dr. Grove's best man.

Radiant Bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was a vision of loveliness, her Titian coloring being enhanced by her exquisite wedding gown of rose point lace and white chiffon falling in graceful lines over the foundation of white dutchess satin. The artistically draped skirt was trimmed with long side panels of white chiffon elaborately embroidered in an effective design of crystals and pearls. The bodice, forming the bateau neckline, had as the only trimming touches of rose point lace. The veil, caught to her soft hair with a coronet of orange blossoms, was of antique maline, and fell in artistic folds to the end of her long court train of white satin and chiffon, exquisitely embroidered in a conventional design of pearls, crystals and

Miss Elizabeth Hale Weds Harry Jones Thursday Evening

Miss Elizabeth Collier Hale and Harry Eugene Jones, of Jonesborough, Ga., were married at 7 o'clock Thursday evening in the Park Street Methodist church, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Tall palms filled the chancel and cathedral candelabra were interspersed with white roses and lovely ferns. The pews reserved for the families were marked with clusters of white roses caught with streamers of white satin.

The bride entered the church with her father, Arthur Hale, who was preceded by the bridesmaids in gowns of rainbow colors. The dresses were all fashioned alike with the long and tight-fitting bodices so fashionable just now. A surprise effect on the front of the bodice ended in a giraffe of silver ribbons and hand-made roses. The long skirts were severely plain and the side panels longer than the skirt. They all carried arm bouquets of Ophelia roses.

Rainbow Dresses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Mamie Matthews, who wore buttercup yellow; Miss Louise Merritt, who wore orchid crepe de chine, and Miss Mary Merritt, who wore Nile green crepe. The maid of honor, Miss Willette Matthews, was crowned in a lovely frock of white kitten's-ear crepe made like the dresses of the bridesmaids. She carried an arm bouquet of Columbia roses caught with a fluffy bow of white tulle.

The bride wore a lovely gown of heaviest white satin, about which there is a double amount of sentiment as it was the wedding dress of her mother, Overdresses of soft and beautiful lace fashioned into most becoming lines and a grille of pearls festooned around the waist at one side in a cabochon with long fringe of pearls reaching almost to the hem completed the dress. Her filmy veil was caught to her lovely dark hair with a chaplet of pearls and orange blossoms and fell gracefully over the long court train fastened at the shoulders and edged the length and sides with seeded pearls. Her lovely slippers of silver cloth were seeded with pearls and the bridal bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

The groomsmen were Robert Campbell, Claude Cox and Percy Bramlett. Hugh Connolly was best man. The ushers were Clarke Rae, Carter Harrison, E. C. Boykin and Elwyn Johns.

Just before the entrance of the bride party Mrs. Carter Harrison sang "I Love You Truly" and "O Promise Me."

During the ceremony "Untill" was softly played by Miss Jennie Tutt.

Motor to Florida.

The bride and groom left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip through Florida. They will make their future home in Jonesborough, Ga., where Mr. Jones is one of the leading merchants.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hale, of 361 Oak street, West End. She is a graduate of the Girls' High school and since leaving school has devoted much time to the study of music, and is a talented pianist.

Mr. Jones is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Jones, of 33 Park street, Atlanta. He is a graduate of the Barnstable Military institute and is a successful merchant of Jonesboro.

"Whenas in silks my Julia goes,
Then, then, methinks, how sweetly flows
The liquefaction of her clothes!"
Next when I cast my eyes and see
That brave vibration each way free,
—O how that glittering taketh me.

Silks for Poets

HOW many years the lowly silkworm has spun its inspiration for poets! If only the impressionable Herrick and his lovely Julia were here today to delight in the new fabrics for Spring. Here are some of the things they would see:

Weaves—Heavy and crepey, as in the spiral crepes—lizard skin, Roshanara and the like.
Smooth and light with a bloom of flat crepe.
Sleek and glossy like foulard.
Patterns—All-over and over all Orientalism.
Chinese characters.
New arrangements of the Parsley palm signet.
Colors—All in bright mosaics or warmly blended patterns.
Beige and gray.
Almond Green—Orange—Amber.

Lest You Forget

—Rich's Silk Sale is backing the allied arts of verse and dress by offering the advanced silks for Spring and Summer at prices that make January the luckiest month of the year. If you'd like to inspire a poet with the liquefaction and glittering of your clothes, buy your silks now—while you can buy more silks.

More Moire

—Murmurs that moire is the mode of the moment come from the Rue de la Paix, reminding us that when Princess Kapurthala arrived from Paris a short time ago she was a complete picture in moire: moire dress, moire bag, moire hat. New York is beginning to wear moire frocks and to use moire ribbon for skirt jabots and trimmings. The silks offered in Rich's January Sale at $4.50 and $4.95 a yard, show moire at its best.

Uncle Toby

MORE fashionable than his flashlight and a walking stick is Uncle Toby's coat which seems to be made of the new imported woolen. This may be seen at Rich's in stripes, checks and plaids—is 54 inches wide and priced $2.95 a yard.

—Your Airedale has the right idea, too. The wool materials are rough and shaggy, if they are to make sports frocks.

The Fashion Piper

EARLIEST of the Spring birds is the Fashion Piper, who claims the Spring Fever Robin as his sole relative. From him we learn that even the birds are to wear brighter colors this Spring and breathlessly we await the first robin wondering if his breast will show Paisley patterns in tones of red.

—The new cottons vie with the silks in weave, pattern and colors. There's a lovely silk and cotton crepe de Chine that already is winning popularity—it is only 98c a yard. Prices of eponges, ratines and cotton matelasse range from 98c to $4.50 a yard.

The Bandana Girl

SUCCESSOR to the college flapper is the bandana girl. Every up-to-date campus has, almost overnight, taken on the appearance of a brightly staged scene from the "Bohemian Girl." School girls, college girls sports-loving and color-loving women insist upon the bandana. At Rich's in silk or georgette—in Paisley or Russian patterns, $4.50.

Miss Glenn Weds Mr. Mumper At Ceremony in Decatur

One of the most beautiful and impressive weddings of the season was that of Miss Margaret Elizabeth Glenn, to Mr. Conrad Hewitt Mumper at Los Angeles, Cal., which took place on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. John W. Pearce on Sycamore street, the Rev. Elam Dempsey officiating.

The entire lower floor was artistically decorated with ferns, palms and white roses.

The stairway down which the bride party came was festooned with smilax and the chandeliers were entwined with it.

White tapers held in cathedral candelabra shed a soft brilliance over the improvised altar of palms and ferns.

White roses in pedestal baskets were used effectively on either side.

Miss Agnes Adams played several violin solos before the entrance of the bride party.

Miss Cliff Mable and Miss Adams rendered the bridal march, using Longren's bridal chorus as a processional, and Mendelssohn's wedding march as a recessional.

Miss Marie Pearce, the bride's cousin, was maid of honor. She entered first, wearing a beautiful costume of black chiffon, fashioned over silver cloth, and trimmed with silver and crystals. She wore a silver bandeau and silver slippers. Her flowers were Ophelia roses.

George Copeland, dressed in a white satin suit came next, bearing the ring on a white satin pillow.

The bride entered with her father, Dr. G. R. Glenn, who gave her away in marriage. She was a radiant picture of girlish beauty in her exquisite, bridal robe of white brocaded satin embroidered in pearls. The court train fell gracefully from her shoulders and the filmy veil of tulle was caught to her soft hair with a coronet of orange blossoms. These same lovely flowers showed the veil amid its long, soft folds.

The bridal bouquet was formed of orchids and bride's roses, showered with lilies of the valley.

Martha and Leila Aikin, wearing beautiful frocks of white chiffon over white satin, and trimmed in pink roses, carried the bride's train.

The bride was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, John W. Pearce, cousin of the bride.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony.

The bride's mother, Mrs. G. A.

Visitors Are Honored at Lovely Luncheon

Mrs. George Mueller and Mrs. A. K. Metz of Jacksonville, who are guests of Mrs. W. E. Leonard, and Mrs. George Goodyear, of Macon, the guest of Mrs. Theo Toms, were honor guests at the luncheon given by Mrs. Tinsley Ragland at the Piedmont Driving club.

Adorning the center of the luncheon table was a French basket holding jonquils and narcissi. Dresden candelsticks held yellow unshaded tapers and alternated with small baskets filled with the same flowers.

Mrs. Ragland wore dark blue georgette embroidered with gold, and a black hat.

Mrs. Mueller was gowned in black georgette crepe fashioned with black taffeta and a henna straw hat.

Mrs. Goodyear's costume was of brown crepe richly embroidered with a hat to match.

Covers were laid for Mesdames Mueller, Metz, Goodyear, Leonard, Toms, Jesse T. Daniel, Charles B. Penner and Frank C. Wilkerson.

Mrs. Foreman's Condition Is Greatly Improved

Mrs. Robert L. Foreman, who was stricken a month ago and who for a while was desperately ill at her home, 988 Peachtree street, is steadily improving. Her physicians say that she has passed the crisis and that it should be simply a question of time before she recovers.

Musicians' Club Will Give Dance

The regular week-end dance of the Musicians' club will take place Saturday evening at Roseland hall, corner Peachtree and Cain streets, beginning at 9 o'clock. Of interest to the members and friends is the announcement that the Georgia Serenaders' orchestra of seven pieces will render the dance program.

Mrs. Chamberlin Is Picked To Head Women Voters Again

Macon, Ga., January 18.—(Special.)—Interest of the Georgia League of Women Voters, assembled in its fourth annual convention at the Hotel Dempsey today centered in the report of the nominating committee at its morning session Thursday. Mrs. Harry Chamberlain, of Atlanta, president of the Georgia league, leads the ticket to succeed herself, and the directors named by the committee, five of whom will be chosen to act as officers of the state league for the next year, are Mrs. Frank McIntyre, of Savannah, director at large; Mrs. C. H. Harrell, of Macon; Miss Eleanor Raulo, of Atlanta; Mrs. J. H. Downey, of Gainesville; and Mrs. G. T. Gate, of Brunswick. Nominations came from the floor, after the report of the committee, these being Mrs. P. W. Alstetter, of Savannah; Mrs. Elliott Cheatham, of Atlanta; Mrs. R. E. Turman, of Atlanta; Mrs. E. B. Harris, of Rome; and Mrs. M. S. Lanier, of Rome. The result of the election will become known at noon Friday. Mrs. Sanford Gay, Mrs. Blanche Williams Morris, Miss Annie T. Wright and Mrs. F. W. Alstetter, chairman, composed the nominating committee.

Mrs. Cheatham Honored.
Mrs. Elliott Cheatham, of Atlanta, has been selected by the national executive committee to succeed Mrs. Julian B. Salloy, of Aiken, S. C., as third regional director of the national league. The third regional comprises nine southern states, and the District of Columbia.

The announcement was made by Mrs. Salloy at the luncheon today. Mrs. Chamberlain made the following recommendations in her president's report:

That a pilgrimage be made to the state legislature during its sessions by a committee of five or more from each league and that a pamphlet be published showing the progress of bills through the legislature or distribution among the leaders; that the state league concentrate on one or two bills the next year, in conformity with the national plan in order that the necessary pressure to get bills through the legislature might be brought to bear and, third, that each league observe a registration week which shall be simultaneously observed among all leagues. Action on the recommendations was postponed until the session tomorrow.

The legislative program of the Georgia league suffered somewhat at the hands of the last legislature, only one of its bills—the children code commission bill—getting past both houses without alteration. This bill is at work and Miss Rhodes Kaufman was appointed to draw up resolutions whereby the McDonald bill, equal guardianship laws bill, the child placement bill and the kindergarten bill, all bills affecting children be withdrawn as they now stand and resubmitted under the child code commission law as amendments.

The last legislature passed the child placement bill, but without an appropriation, and although an appropriation was granted the Georgia Training School for Girls it is not adequate. Under the Shepard-Towner bill $11,000 will be available to the state board of health, making $17,000. It is possible to get $24,000 by matching federal appropriations and this will be one of the aims of the state league.

Mrs. Elliott Cheatham, of Atlanta, presided over the afternoon session. Mrs. Chamberlain outlined the legislative program for the next year, action on which was deferred. Dr. Preston, of the institute for the feeble minded, presented the needs of the institution to the convention.

"Thank God, she still lives," fervently exclaimed Mrs. Charles Goodman, of Atlanta, recording secretary of the Georgia league, at the conclusion of Mrs. Edward Costigan's address dealing with the work of the living costs committee of the National League of Women Voters. The remark came at the end of her short appreciation of the work of the national committee women. Mrs. Costigan, in a talk characterized by optimism and a certain amount of idealism compounded with a great deal of the practical, outlined some of the main points for which her committee is working. She stated that women have come through the beautifying and pure philanthropy passes of service to the necessity of working for the reduction of the cost of living. She wants the women to work to reduce the power of investigation to the federal trade commission by supporting the packer's and stockyard's bill whereby large monopolies will be checked, to work for the bill standardizing containers, reducing the present great number to five, to eliminate unnecessary steps from producer to consumer, to support co-operative associations and the home economics bill.

was one of the bright features of the afternoon session. "You have to be a bull weevil, or a cow tick, to stir the hearts of our Georgia legislators," she said. She is responsible for getting the child placement bill before both houses at the eleventh hour of the session of the last legislature, working for six weeks to get it a hearing.

Mrs. Elliott Cheatham reported the status of the women in industry bill and Miss Rhoda Kaufman spoke on the work of the state welfare board. At the evening session Harry S. Strozier, of Macon, and Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, national executive secretary of the National League of Women Voters, addressed the convention.

The Friday morning session will begin at 10:30, when final reports will be heard and two minute addresses from local league presidents will be given.

Those attending the convention are Mrs. Harry Chamberlain, Atlanta; Mrs. Charles Goodman, Atlanta; Mrs. Viola R. Napier, Macon; Mrs. F. W. Alstetter, Savannah; Miss Bertha Hodgson, Athens; Mrs. Gordon Grover, Jr., Savannah; Mrs. Joseph Wilkins, Athens; Mrs. L. L. Hendren, Athens; Mrs. G. T. Gate, Brunswick; Mrs. Elliott Cheatham, Atlanta; Mrs. Julian B. Salloy, Aiken, S. C.; Mrs. Sanford Gay, Atlanta; Mrs. John E. Morris, Quitman; Mrs. R. L. Schley, Atlanta; Mrs. H. H. Shackleton, Rome; Mrs. J. H. Downey, Gainesville; Miss Annie T. Wright, Augusta; Mrs. A. G. Maxwell; Mrs. J. L. Ruble, Quitman; Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. R. L. Turman, Atlanta; Mrs. E. B. Harris, Rome; Mrs. M. S. Lanier, Mrs. C. C. Harrell, Mrs. R. L. Borner, Mrs. R. L. Smith, Mrs. James Locante Furman, Mrs. J. R. L. Smith, Mrs. J. N. Talley, Mrs. F. H. Harriott, all of Macon; Mrs. Fred C. Rice, Atlanta; Mrs. George L. Turner, Atlanta; Mrs. Chester Johnson, Atlanta; Mrs. G. A. Heide, Mrs. W. T. Morgan, Mrs. W. H. Hardin, Mrs. Edgar Ross, Mrs. B. F. Eardon, and Miss Rosette Collins, all of Macon.

Van Dyke, B. T. Lively, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Webster.

Mrs. Rice Is Hostess.

Mrs. Frederick Rice, seventh ward chairman of the League of Women Voters, entertained at luncheon on Monday, a called meeting of her co-workers, at her home in West End. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss plans for the year's work and formulate a program along constructive and educational lines, including the further organization of district meetings and the establishing of a weekly citizenship class.

Already membership meetings are being held weekly in different sections of the ward under the able leadership of Mrs. Chester Johnson. These meetings have fully established the worthiness of the move, for not only are many new members added to the league, but the old members are brought together by a bond of mutual interest in an hour of social pleasantness.

Miss Carner Tells Y. W. C. A. Meeting About Women Workers

Miss Lucy P. Carner, industrial division secretary of the personal division of the national board of the Y. W. C. A., is in Atlanta, from New York. She is attending the Y. W. C. A. Industrial Institute for the Southern region which is being held at the Central Congregational church. As a national leader of the national board of the Y. W. C. A., she is the leading speaker at the institute.

"In our efforts towards legislation affecting women in industry," says Miss Carner, "the Y. W. C. A. is following the social ideals of the churches adopted three years ago in Cleveland."

We are working for shorter hours for women who work, for the prevention of night work and of child labor and for the creating of a minimum wage standard.

All state legislation is, of course, left to state and local bodies and the national body gives its attention to Federal legislation.

On the national legislative council of the Y. W. C. A. there are representatives from all states.

"The industrial institute conducted by the Y. W. C. A." went on Miss Carner, "is one of the most important meetings which has convened to consider matters relating to industrial women workers. In the United States one of every four persons employed is a woman, which gives an earning body of women in this country of 8,500,000. Naturally, as women's work has left the home, as time has brought so many changes, women have followed this work into factories, offices and industries. It must be of interest in the south, that in one state alone in this section, South Carolina, there are more women employed than in any other state. This information cannot but do away with the tradition that 'southern women do not work.' Labor has never been able to do with out women and the economic burden is borne by them, as well as by men. Such meetings as the Y. W. C. A. has just closed are of vital importance in the South," concluded Miss Carner.

Mrs. A. D. Adair Gives Lovely Tea

Miss Anne Stringfellow and her sister, Mrs. Gilmore Greene, were the guests of honor at a large tea given by Mrs. A. D. Adair Thursday afternoon at her home on Peachtree street. Miss Stringfellow is one of the season's attractive debutantes and Mrs. Greene's recent marriage was one of the most interesting social events of the winter. This young bride was much admired at Mrs. Adair's tea when she wore a handsome dress of green velvet over which was draped green chiffon and with which she wore a corsage bouquet of Palma violets and lilies of the valley.

Miss Anne Stringfellow was gown in king's blue lace veiling silver cloths of the same shade.

Mrs. Adair's tea received her guests in a beautiful gown of brown lace combined with gold metal cloth, was assisted by Miss Margaret MacIntyre, Miss Marianna Goldsmith, Miss Sue Brown, Sterne and Mrs. Charles D'Orme.

Marriage and Divorce Bill Drafted by Mrs. Edward White

BY BESSIE SHAW STAFFORD.

Mrs. Edward Franklin White, of Indianapolis, Ind., chairman of the legislative department for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, deputy attorney-general for Indiana, was charged with the task of drafting a national marriage and divorce bill by the biennial convention of the club held last June in Chattanooga, N. Y. She proposes one marriage law instead of 48 of them, and a divorce law which will be as valid in one state as in another. It will serve to straighten out the marriage and divorce tangle in this country caused by the diversity of laws, and as the club women are standing in a national body behind this movement, the results will be most stirring and interesting. There would probably have to be an amendment to the constitution before Mrs. White's bill could pass, for as it now stands marriage and divorce are left to the laws of the individual states and the government is prohibited from interfering.

The amendment is as follows: "The congress shall have power to make uniform regulations for marriage and divorce in the several states and all territories subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, provide for the care, custody and legitimation of children affected by such regulations, and provide penalties for the violation thereof."

It is also recommended that, pending the action of congress, which will necessarily be delayed three or four years, the same bill be introduced in the state legislatures at this coming session. This will give immediate relief from some of the evils which have become so scandalous, and will encourage discussion and thought. This matter was presented to the governors of the various states at their recent conference at White Sulphur Springs, and met with enthusiastic approval.

The provisions of this bill do not represent any individual's ideas of reform, but are a composite of existing laws, and of the uniform law proposed by the commission on uniform laws and the requests of senators and representatives from many states. It will be introduced in Indiana on the first day of the session by her woman representative.

Mrs. White's bill includes a marriage certificate and provisions are made to fine one or place them in jail if misstatements are made about age.

The outstanding feature of the bill is that it makes marriage harder and divorce easier than it is, at least in some states.

Mrs. White is a successful wife and mother, an active club woman, a prominent lawyer and qualifies as a leader for two leading publishers of law books.

The Pictorial Review of February has drafted the high spots of Mrs. White's bill and the editor of the woman's page of The Constitution reproduces them for the benefit of the women readers, and because of the fact that it will give the woman's point of view as presented by one who is given deep thought and hours of study to the subject.

Marriage Provisions—Forbidden marriage without a license, for which application must be made, by either party, two weeks before its final issuance. Both parties must be present when it is issued. Application to be posted in county clerk's office and published in newspaper.

Marriageable age, with consent of parents, 16 for girls, and 18 for boys. Legal age, without consent of parents, 18 for girls and 21 for boys.

Forbidden marriage of imbeciles, the insane, feeble-minded, epileptic, paupers, those afflicted with tuberculosis or venereal disease, of blacks and whites, or of those related within and including the degree of first cousins.

Two witnesses besides the officiating clergyman or official must be present at the marriage.

Penalties shall be imposed on those who issue licenses or perform marriage ceremonies contrary to these provisions.

A marriage which is legal in the state where contracted shall be legal in all states.

Divorce Provisions—Grounds upon which divorce may be granted, interpretations to be alike for men and women, are as follows: Adultery, cruel or inhuman treatment, abandonment or failure to provide for a period of a year, incurable insanity, and the commission by either party of an infamous crime. Divorce shall not be granted upon the ground of adultery where there is evidence of collusion.

An interesting musical program has been arranged, featuring Miss Louise Barilli.

The following ladies, members of the council, will receive:

Mrs. Marvin Underwood, Mrs. Charles Leland, Mrs. Lewis Stark, Mrs. L. H. Glass, Mrs. Walter Hill, Mrs. R. C. Coglan, Mrs. L. H. Moss, Mrs. Charles Goodman, Mrs. R. B. Wilmer, Mrs. J. W. Smith, Mrs. Milton Kirtz, Miss M. Y. Dunbar, Mrs. Carl Fisher, Mrs. E. E. Fomery, and Mrs. Christian Clarke.

By contrast with the swarming foreign quarter she also worked in the lovely Fort Washington branch far uptown overlooking the lovely Hudson.

She loves horses. Miss Wolff is a devoted lover of horses and her own saddlehorse, "Susan," is her born companion.

Twice a week she mounts on Susan's friendly back and gallops off into the lovely roads about Atlanta and receives fresh inspiration for work. She and Susan played considerable parts in the Horse Show here at Piedmont Park last spring. In fact, Susan is her confidant—and just the sort of confidant one loves to have—never failing, never complaining and always ready.

When the gallop is over Miss Wolff returns to her shop and is all "business" again. She has with her lovely Marjorie McLeod, who "minds" the shop on horseback days.

In the "Little Book Shop" there are lovely greeting cards and calendars and stationery and books "that are different" in addition to all of the "regular" books we love to read.

Mr. and Mrs. Toms Give Buffet Supper For Visitors

Mr. and Mrs. Theo Toms entertained informally at a buffet supper Thursday evening, honoring Mrs. George Mueller and Mrs. A. K. Metz of Jacksonville, Fla.

Foliage plants and vases of bright flowers were used effectively throughout the reception rooms. Adorning the table in the dining room were a lace cloth and a central decoration of pink carnations in a large silver basket.

Mrs. Toms wore a gown of rose-colored georgette.

Mrs. Metz was handsomely gowned in American Beauty georgette, and Mrs. Mueller's costume was of black lace.

Twenty-five guests were invited.

Tea Will Honor Art Department Of Woman's Club

One of the most attractive social affairs of Friday will be a tea which the Art council is giving to the department of art of the Atlanta Woman's club at the home of Mrs. Charles Lorrain, 17 East Fifteenth street.

The baby health center of the Adair community was made a permanent institution by action of the George W. Adair Parent-Teacher association at the meeting Wednesday afternoon.

The object is to teach the mothers child health through the detection of disease in its very earliest stages.

With this in view the first meeting for examination of babies will be held at the school on the afternoon of Friday, January 19. All mothers in the community are asked to make a note of this date and to take advantage without fail of this opportunity to have pointed out to them any defects in their babies that may need correction.

"Little Book Shop" Atlanta Girls' New Venture

The "Little Book Shop" opened in the Arcade is the newest venture of Miss Ellen Wolff, young Atlanta girl. She is granddaughter of Judge Hillier and a daughter of the late Dr. Bernard Wolff.

BY MARTHA GOODE ANDERSON, and visited the fascinating small shops of Greenwich village. I hope to make this shop of real value for I feel that it fills a real need. I found at Christmas time that there was the greatest demand for foreign periodicals and I could not keep a large enough supply of the London Illustrated News, The Graphic, Tit Bits and T. P. and the French magazines, "Femina" and "Le Monde Illustré."

I sold out almost all the staff of the Christmas issues illustrated. A new shipment of these fascinating magazines is just arriving along with a lot of French books.

The young shopkeeper is a graduate of Carnegie Library school and furthered her love of books by work in Carnegie library here. She was also a member of the staff of the New York public library and had interesting experiences in the metropolitan quarter she also worked in the great deal of the foreign population of that crowded city in the Rivington street and Seward Park branches.

In the "Little Book Shop" there are lovely greeting cards and calendars and stationery and books "that are different" in addition to all of the "regular" books we love to read.

The baby health center of the Adair community was made a permanent institution by action of the George W. Adair Parent-Teacher association at the meeting Wednesday afternoon.

The object is to teach the mothers child health through the detection of disease in its very earliest stages.

With this in view the first meeting for examination of babies will be held at the school on the afternoon of Friday, January 19. All mothers in the community are asked to make a note of this date and to take advantage without fail of this opportunity to have pointed out to them any defects in their babies that may need correction.

Course tickets for the three readings will be $2, and single tickets $1 each. They will be placed on sale at various spots to be later announced, or can be procured from any officer of the Drama League.

BY MARTHA GOODE ANDERSON, and visited the fascinating small shops of Greenwich village. I hope to make this shop of real value for I feel that it fills a real need. I found at Christmas time that there was the greatest demand for foreign periodicals and I could not keep a large enough supply of the London Illustrated News, The Graphic, Tit Bits and T. P. and the French magazines, "Femina" and "Le Monde Illustré."

I sold out almost all the staff of the Christmas issues illustrated. A new shipment of these fascinating magazines is just arriving along with a lot of French books.

By contrast with the swarming foreign quarter she also worked in the lovely Fort Washington branch far uptown overlooking the lovely Hudson.

CHAPTER XIX.

Too Much Art.

Each afternoon and evening after that the poet sketched those who came to "The Portico," tempering his price to suit their pocketbooks. Some days he did very well; when there were no skimmers who wanted their portraits done, he sketched Cynthia and Lucile.

"We ought to have something new, though," Lucile declared. "Something that would tell the whole town about us. We've got to have more publicity—get into the newspapers."

Fortunately Cynthia was not present, or she would have vetoed the plan that Lucile, the poet, and a friend of his made on the spot. She wanted nothing in the world less than she wanted publicity at that moment. She was very happy when she named her thoughts to the present and refused to think of Roger; when she thought of him, and the happiness of their life together before Lucile and Monica came, she was almost desperate.

That evening, as she sat behind her little table in a corner of the room, the poet turned to a man who had just come in. Cynthia did not know any more than the various customers knew, that the man was the friend who had spent that morning with Lucile and the poet.

The man came over to Cynthia and began to talk with her. As he continued to talk, she grew uneasy; he was insisting that he would not die until she dined with him. The poet turned around suddenly, seeming to see the man for the first time. He crossed the room, and asked what the stranger wanted.

"Only to talk with the most beautiful woman in Greenwich Village," replied the other, making Cynthia a low bow.

"She talks only with her friends," retorted the poet, and knocked the stranger down.

Cynthia cried out and drew back against the wall. The stranger leaped to his feet and presented his card to the poet, who tore it to pieces and threw it on the floor.

"I'll meet you on the Palisades tomorrow at dawn; we'll settle this with revolvers!" he exclaimed.

Cynthia never suspected that he was a reporter.

The room cleared quickly; the stranger left at once, and then, as the poet was explaining the things to Cynthia, returned by the back door.

"It'll bring a lot of people here—you see if it doesn't!" the poet cried delightedly. "That's the sort of fool stunt that amuses people. Just wait till tomorrow!"

Cynthia was rather annoyed by the whole affair, but she had lived long enough in the Village to know that nothing, no matter how absurd it was, could hold people's attention for very long.

She opened "The Portico" the next day as the scrub woman had promised to be there early. But the woman did not arrive, and finally Cynthia got a mop and a pail of water and took matters into her own hands. She was busy working when a young man appeared in the doorway.

She told him that the shop was not really open yet, but he assured her that he could wait until it was, and wandered about, looking at everything and occasionally asking a question.

She rather enjoyed talking with him; he seemed to think that she was an employee in the shop, and she was amused at the mistake, wondering what he would say if he knew that she was a society woman, and not a waitress.

When she had finished her work she made coffee and toast and scrambled some eggs for him; he seemed about as hungry while she talked, asking now and then what she was doing, now she asked it, and what she thought of the village, anyway.

"Oh, it's a delightful place!" she assured him forgetting her role. "It must be tiresome after a while, but for a time it's fascinating. You never know what's going to happen next. I love it!"

He went away then, and she got out the day's menu and began to copy it on the card, hardly giving him another thought. She never suspected that he was a reporter.

Miss Read

Is Honored.

Miss Annie Read, of Savannah, the attractive guest of Mrs. Robert C. Alston, was honor guest at the informal luncheon given by Mrs. Waldo Alston at her home on Peachtree road.

The luncheon table was overlaid with an exquisite patchwork cover and adorned with a mound of Columbia roses and narcissi. Pink candle sticks with pink unshaded tapers, alternated with small plateaus of narcissi and Columbia roses. Pink and blue forget-me-not cards marked the guests' places.

Mrs. Mallory wore a black panne velvet, the bodice fashioned of gold brocade chiton.

Miss Read's costume was of gray tulle embroidered, with a black straw hat.

Miss Mabel Murray

Is Complimented.

Mrs. Charles Downman was hostess at bridge at the Druid Hills Golf club Thursday afternoon, having as her guest of honor, Miss Mabel Murray, of Baltimore, Md., who is visiting Mrs. Charles Murray at her home on Barnett avenue.

Mrs. Downman wore a gown of blue duvetyne and hat to match.

The guest of honor was gowned in blue cordon crepe. Her large picture hat was of black velvet.

Following the newer fashion of having a prize at each table, Mrs. Downman presented lovely silver ten balls in silver stands to the winning player at each of the four tables. The lucky players were Mrs. L. H. Beck, Mrs. Charles Murray, Mrs. W. G. Sharretts and Mrs. Rucker McCarty.

Miss Murray was presented with a blue candy jar.

Tea was served after the game and a dozen friends joined the bridge players at this hour.

Mrs. Jones

Calls Meeting.

The president, Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, has called a meeting of the executive board of the Georgia Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations at the home of the vice president, Mrs. Fred Wessels, 501 East Waldburg street, Savannah, Ga., Wednesday morning, January 24, at 10:30 o'clock, for the transaction of regular business. Mrs. Charles E. Robertson, corresponding secretary.

Miss Teabeat

Is Hostess

Miss Ada Teabeat was hostess at a matinee party, Thursday, at the Forsyth theatre in honor of Miss Lucy Candler and Miss Goodwyn Denny, of Rome.

Following the play, Miss Teabeat entertained her guests at tea.

Miss Candler wore an afternoon gown of blue tricotine and a black picture hat.

Miss Denny was gowned in blue polka dot twill. She wore a hat to match.

Confessions of a Debutante

BY RUTH AGNES ABELING

"DISCARDED!"
Who's Who in the Story.
I, an erstwhile butterfly, whose debut has just taken place, destined to marry Jonathan Grey, fat, more than forty and very rich.

My mother, my mother, who is ambitious. My stranger, an unknown youth who staged to my coming out party.

Tuesday, December 5.

I wonder today if I am myself any more?
I'm not the girl who made her debut so short a while ago.

I'm a woman who has broken and cried and fought it out with herself and finally grown strong enough to build a golden altar out of her disappointment and offer her own heart on it.

Jonathan Grey took me out for dinner last night. Mama was along. After we went to Rita Warren's coming out party.

Jonathan tried to dance with me. We were going wretchedly, when suddenly I saw my beautiful stranger coming straight through the dancers toward me. He took me out of Jonathan's arms.

We danced. He didn't speak. There was such a crowd. So many girls, so many flowers, so much perfume. It was maddening.

Finally we stopped near the door. I felt myself pushed through the crowd. My stranger was talking to me.

"Can you get a wrap?" He asked. I found my cloak in the dressing room and then joined him again at the door.

He put his arm around me and crushed my hands so that the rings tore into the flesh.

"Let's get out of here," he said. We walked two blocks along Madison avenue without saying a word. And then this lad whose name I didn't even know started to talk to me, that wonderful light in his eyes, that wonderful tone in his voice.

Mrs. Lipscomb

Honors Mrs. Jones.

Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb entertained at tea at the Piedmont Driving club in compliment to Mrs. Catherine Tift Jones, of New York and Upper Montclair, N. J.

The tea table placed in the gray room, where the guests were received, was adorned by a lace cover and had a beautiful centerpiece a Belleek bowl filled with sweet peas in pastel shades. Surrounding this were Belleek candlesticks holding lavender tapers.

Mrs. Lipscomb was gowned in black satin and wore a black beaver hat trimmed with burnt orange.

Mrs. Jones wore brown lace and chiffon and a hat to match. Completing her costume was a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses.

The guests included a few friends of Mrs. Jones.

Miss Scruggs

Is Honored.

Miss Louise Scruggs, a bride-elect of this month, was honor guest at the theater party given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. L. Le Norris Mundy.

The guests invited were Misses Scruggs, Dorothy Bryant, Corday Rice, Mildred Fraser, Mesdames Howard Healey, Robert Goodhart and Earl Neal.

Mrs. Dunbar

Is Complimented.

Mrs. George Walker was a charming hostess Thursday when she entertained at luncheon at the Georgian Terrace in compliment to Mrs. Clement Evans Dunbar, the attractive guest of Mrs. Martin Dunbar.

The luncheon table was covered by a lace cloth and was decorated according to the color scheme of green and white. The centerpiece was a large basket filled with narcissi and encircling this were silver candelabra holding unshaded white tapers. The place of each guest was marked by a hand-painted card.

The guests included Mrs. Clement Evans Dunbar, Mrs. Louis Moeckle, Mrs. Carl Becker.

Miss Foote Will

Give Bridge-Tea

Miss Sarah Foote will entertain a group of young girls at bridge Friday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Foote, in Ansley Park.

A Special Purchase and Sale of

Boys' 2-Trouser Suits

Just 200
Suits

$10.95

Sizes
6 to 18

New spring models — all wool fabrics — every suit with two pairs of trousers. Not a sale proposition, but suits from our regular manufacturers, the same models we order again and again.

Sport styles, models with inverted or box pleated backs, inverted pleats in front and other fancy styles. Pleated or flap pockets. Coats are serge or mohair lined. Trousers lined and taped throughout.

Every pattern has been selected for service as well as looks.

Clothing prices are advancing—there is no doubt about that. Fabrics are higher, owing to the new tariff regulation, for one thing. Then the cost of production is more. Therefore, we say in all frankness that you will save money on your boy's clothing if you take advantage of this sale.

Mail Orders Filled. We are always glad to give our out-of-town friends advantage of any special offering we may have, but suggest that they order early.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

A Modern Bread Board.
An old photograph record makes an excellent lightweight bread board that can be kept in the bread box.

Cauliflower.
One tablespoonful of vinegar added to the cold water when putting cauliflower on to boil will bring out the flavor and also draw any insects out of the head.

Sauces to Serve.
Mint sauce with roast lamb.
Horseshallish with roast beef.
Apple sauce with roast pork.
Cranberry sauce with turkey.
Tomato sauce with roast veal.
Caper sauce with boiled mutton.
Black currant jelly with roast duck.

For a Bad Scorch.
If you have badly scorched a cotton fabric, try this method of getting the mark out. Dip the article in cold water and hang dripping wet on the line in the hot sunshine. As soon as it dries wet it again and repeat the process again and again. It may take a couple of days and a night's exposure, but is a cure that will not in any way injure the wearing quality of the material and only means a little patience.

FAIR AND COLDER WILL BE WEATHER MENU FOR TODAY

Atlanta may expect fair and colder weather Friday—but that hardly means any cold weather yet, in the opinion of C. F. von Herrmann, of the local weather office.

Parts of Georgia will be cloudy Friday, and the north and central portions are looked for cooler weather. Friday night it is expected to be a little colder, but the rise in temperature Thursday may be little more than offset by this drop expected Friday night.

The Constitution's Novel-a-Week Guns of the Gods

BY TALBOT MUNDY

Next Week, "Fire Mountain"
By Norman Springer

Soon after the wedding and coronation it began to be rumored that Utrupa had given Blaine another contract, and the news, of course, reached Samson's ears.

So Samson called on Utrupa and requested explanations. He was told that the new maharajah, it seemed, had a fancy to build a palace where the fort stood, and the matter was receiving shrewd investigation by Dick.

Samson could not go and investigate what Blaine was doing, because he was given plainly to understand that the new palace was the maharajah's business.

The efforts of quite a number of spies, too, were unavailing.

So Dick had his days pretty much to himself, except when Tess brought his lunch to him, or Yasmini herself in boots and turban rode up.

The guards on the bastions, and in the great keep in the center, knew nothing whatever of what was happening, because all Dick's activity was underground and Tom Tripe, with that ferocious dog of his, kept guard over the ancient door that led to the lower passages.

Tom keeping strictly sober, slept in the fort and had nothing of importance to any one. He looked drawn and nervous, as if something had terrified him, but public opinion ascribed that to the "snakes" on the night of the coronation.

Then about sundown one evening Tom Tripe galloped in a great hurry to Utrupa's palace. That was nothing to excite comment, because in his official capacity he was always supposed to be galloping all over the place on some errand or another.

But after Dick Utrupa and Yasmini rode out of the palace unattended, which did cause comment, Yasmini in man's clothes, as usual when she went on some adventure.

Tess was up at the fort before them, waiting with Dick outside the locked door leading to the ancient passages below. They said nothing beyond the most perfunctory greetings, but, each taking a kerosene lantern, passed through the door in single file, Tom leading, and locked the door after them.

"I've not been in," said Dick's voice from behind them. "All I've done is force an entrance."

From in front Tom Tripe answered.

"And I wouldn't have liked your job, sir! It was bad enough to sit and guard the door. After you'd gone o' nights I'd sit for hours with my hair on end, listening; and the dog 'ud growl beside me as if he saw ghosts!"

"Maybe it was snakes," Yasmini answered.

"No, your ladyship. This was the sound of some one digging—digging all night long down in the bowels of the earth! Look out!"

They all jumped, but it proved to be only Tom's own shadow that had frightened him.

They passed down into a sort of cavern that had been used for ammunition room. At the far end one very heavy stone was lifted and laid back, disclosing a dark hole.

"I used cannon balls," said Dick, "to drop on the stones and listen for a hollow noise. Once I found that the game was simple."

Leading down into the dark hole were twelve more steps, descending straight, but turning sharply at the bottom. Dick led the way.

"The next sight's gruesome!" he announced.

The passage turned into a lofty chamber in the rock. In the shadows at one end an image of Jinendra smiled complacently.

"This is the 'grue,'" said Dick, holding his lantern high.

Colorful Khartum.
(From Asia.)

On a certain map of Africa I have been studying a little black circle with a dot in the middle, labeled "Khartum," and I have felt sorrow over the inability of a cartographer to tell anything of the color and life and distinction that belong essentially to one place, and not another.

Who would know, for instance, from the map, that noisy swallows sweep low in a game of eternal hide and seek along the upper balcony of that abomination of Khartum known as the Grand hotel, or that clumsy camel carts pass along the embankment of the Blue Nile just below, casting black shadows on the red road, or that Arabs in flying white draperies and orange shoes go clapping by on little donkeys with bells?

From that upper veranda, in the hours of the day when it was too hot to move, I used to lie stretched in a canvas chair and lazily let the scenery slip past. Every boat with great stern paddle wheels chugged at periodic intervals back and forth between the two halves of the city of "elephant's trunk." At all times there were the Nile sailboats unchanged since the days of Rameses, the masts upheld by a cone shaped network of ropes, balancing long, slantwise, sharply pointed sails.

At all times, too, the irrigation wheels along the banks vented their long drawn agony in strident wails. Round and round went the two oxen with the microscopic black boy perched on the tongue between them, and very slowly the wooden wheels revolved and the long shaped buckets of backed clay came up on their chain, emptied themselves into a trough and sloped down again into the Nile—while a trickle of water ran away to quench the terrible thirst of the desert canals.

Sometimes I drove out at sunset, when the shaggy date palms were silhouetted against the flaming sky, or went out in a boat on the Nile. At this hour the glare of the sun, which had seared my eyeballs all day, lifted from my eyelids like a great weight.

I saw how the sky and water world turned amber and rose, and how the sails, where the last light caught them, were streaked suddenly vermilion. For even before the glow vanished, five flies began to outline with their pole green light the ravens of the palms, and a lion colored moon with all the little star cubes came prowling through the African night.

Its light fell on a circle of skeletons, all perfect, each with its head toward a brass bowl in the center.

"Those," said Yasmini, "are the bones of priests, who died when the secret of the place was taken from them! My father told me they were left to starve to death. This was Jinendra's temple."

"D'you suppose they pulled that out stone from the walls, trying to force a way out?" Dick hazarded.

"I would have gone straight to the image of Jinendra," said Yasmini. "Jinendra smiles and keeps his secret so well that I should have suspected him at once!"

"I went to that last," Dick answered. "I pried it away from the wall at last with steel wedges, and there's just room to squeeze in behind it. Beyond that is another wall that I had to cut through with a chisel. Who goes in first?"

Yasmini would have led the way, but nobody would permit that.

"Let the dog go first!" Tom proposed. "Trotters, behind Jinendra's image, with eyes glaring and a low rumbling growl issuing from between bared teeth. The passage was about ten feet long and a yard wide. They squeezed one at a time through the narrow break Dick had made in the end of it, into a high, pitch-dark cave that smelt unexplainably of wood smoke."

The first glance was enough to show that they stood in the secret treasure vault of Siam. There were ancient gold coins in heaps on the floor. But what made Dick exclaim were the bars of silver stacked at the rear and along one side in rows as high as a man.

"My contract reads gold!" he said. "A percentage of all gold. There's not a word in it of silver. Who'd ever have thought of finding silver, anyhow, in this old mountain?"

"Your percentage of the gold will make you rich," said Utrupa. "But you shall take silver too."

"Look out!" yelled Tom Tripe suddenly. But the warning came too late. Out of a shadow rushed a man with a long dagger, stabbing frantically at Dick. Tom's revolver missed, filling the chamber with noise and smoke.

Down went Dick under his assailant, and the dagger rose and fell in spasmodic jerks. Dick had hold of the man's wrist, but the dagger-point dripped blood and the fury of the attack increased as Dick appeared to weaken.

Utrupa ran in to drag the assailant off, but Trotters got there first—chase his neck-hold like a wolf in battle—and in another second Dick was free with Tess kneeling beside him while a life-and-death fight between animal and man raged between the bars of silver.

"Gungadhura!" said Yasmini. "So Gungadhura was Tom Tripe's ghost?" Dick's wounds were not serious. Tess stanchied them with torn linen. "How did Gungadhura get in here?" wondered Tess.

"Through the hole at the end of the mine shaft, I suppose," said Dick. "I built up the lower one—he came one day and saw me doing it—but left a space at the top that looked too small for a man to crawl through. Then I blocked the mouth of the tunnel afterward, and shut him in, I suppose. He's had the workmen's rice and water bottles, and they left a lot of fagots in the tunnel, too, I remember. That accounts for the smell of smoke."

"When did you first know you'd found the treasure, Dick?" asked Tess. "Not until the day that Gungadhura found me closing up the vault, and asked me to dig at the other place. The princess told me I was on the trail of it that night that you went with her by camel; but I didn't know I'd found it till the day that Gungadhura came."

"How did you know where it was?" Tess asked, and Yasmini laughed. "A hundred guarded it. I looked for a hundred pipal trees, and found them—near the River palace. But they were not changed once a month. I looked from there, and saw another hundred pipal trees—here, below this fort—exactly a hundred. But neither were they changed once a month. Then I counted the garrison of the fort—exactly a hundred, all told. Then I knew!"

Smoking a cigarette lazily on Utrupa's palace roof, Yasmini reached for Tess' hand.

"Come nearer. See—take this. It is the value, and more, of the percentage of the silver that your husband would not take."

She clasped a diamond necklace around Tess' neck, and watched it gleam and sparkle in the refracted sunlight.

"Don't you love it? Aren't they perfect? And now—you've a great big draft of money, so I suppose you're both off to America, and good-by to me forever!"

"For a long time."

"But why such a long time? You must come again soon. Come next year. You and I love each other. You teach me things I did not know, and you never irritate me. I love you. You must come back next year!"

Tess shook her head.

"But why?"

"They say the climate isn't good for them until they're eighteen at least—some say twenty."

"Oh! Oh, I envy you! What will you call him? It will be a boy—it is sure to be a boy."

"Richard will be one name, after my husband."

"And the other? You must name him after me in some way. You cannot call a boy Yasmini. Would Utrupa sound too strange in America?"

"Rupert would sound better."

"Good! He shall be Rupert, and I will send a gift to him!"

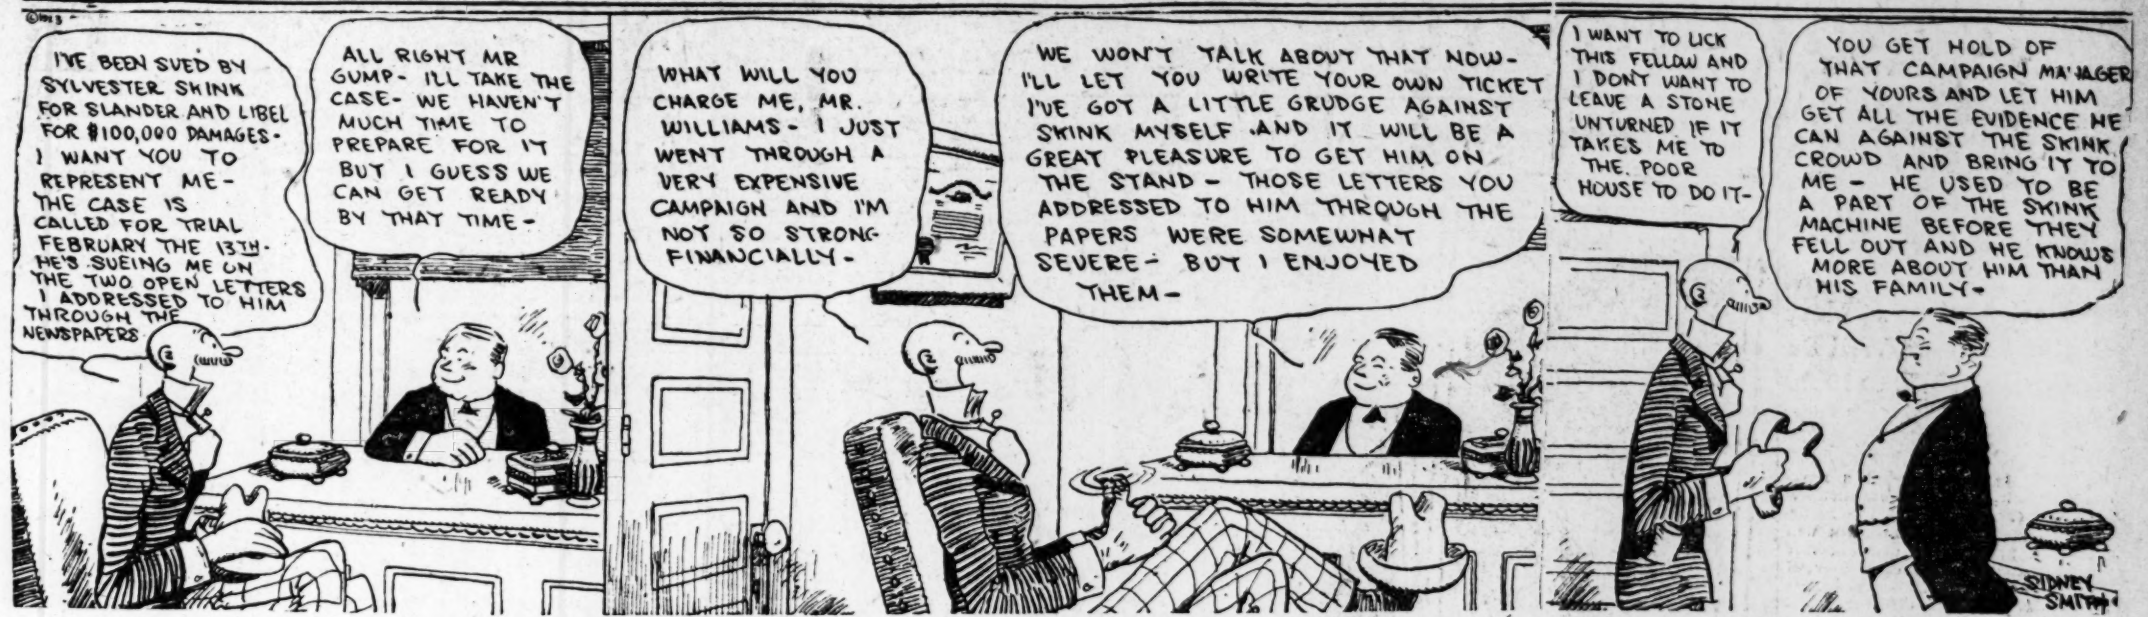

(That accounts for the initials R. B. on a certain young man's trunk at Yale, and for the imported pedigree horse he rides during vacation—the third one, by the way, of a succession he has received from India.)

And that is the whole story, as Yasmini told it to me in the wonderful old palace at Buhl, years afterward, when Utrupa was dead, and the English government had sent her into forced seclusion for a while—to repent of her manifold political sins, as they thought—and to start new enterprises as it happened. She had not seen Theresa Blaine again, she told me, although they always corresponded; and she assured me over and over again, calling the painted figures of the old gods on the walls to witness, that but for Theresa Blaine's companionship and affection at the right moment, she would never have had the courage to do what she did, even though the guns of the gods were there to help her.

THE END.

THE GUMPS—JUST BEFORE THE BATTLE

"I'VE BEEN SUED BY SYLVESTER SKINK FOR SLANDER AND LIBEL FOR $100,000 DAMAGES. I WANT YOU TO REPRESENT ME—THE CASE IS CALLED FOR TRIAL FEBRUARY THE 13TH. HE'S SUING ME ON THE TWO OPEN LETTERS I ADDRESSED TO HIM THROUGH THE NEWSPAPERS."

"ALL RIGHT MR GUMP— I'LL TAKE THE CASE— WE HAVEN'T MUCH TIME TO PREPARE FOR IT BUT I GUESS WE CAN GET READY BY THAT TIME—"

"WHAT WILL YOU CHARGE ME, MR. WILLIAMS— I JUST WENT THROUGH A VERY EXPENSIVE CAMPAIGN AND I'M NOT SO STRONG FINANCIALLY—"

"WE WON'T TALK ABOUT THAT NOW— I'LL LET YOU WRITE YOUR OWN TICKET. I'VE GOT A LITTLE GRUDGE AGAINST SKINK MYSELF AND IT WILL BE A GREAT PLEASURE TO GET HIM ON THE STAND— THOSE LETTERS YOU ADDRESSED TO HIM THROUGH THE PAPERS WERE SOMEWHAT SEVERE— BUT I ENJOYED THEM—"

"I WANT TO LICK THIS FELLOW AND I DON'T WANT TO LEAVE A STONE UNTURNED IF IT TAKES ME TO THE POOR HOUSE TO DO IT—"

"YOU GET HOLD OF THAT CAMPAIGN MANAGER OF YOURS AND LET HIM GET ALL THE EVIDENCE HE CAN AGAINST THE SKINK CROWD AND BRING IT TO ME— HE USED TO BE A PART OF THE SKINK MACHINE BEFORE THEY FELL OUT AND HE KNOWS MORE ABOUT HIM THAN HIS FAMILY—"

New York, January 18.—The cotton market showed increased strength and activity today, with prices making new high records for the season on more or less general buying. May contracts sold up to 28.20, making a net advance of 58 points, and closed at 28.25, with the general market closing strong 56 to 63 points net higher. The market opened firm 20 to 42 points higher. The trade evidently found no fresh cause for uneasiness in the news from Europe, and there was active buying on the firmness of Liverpool and the increasing spot sales reported there. Private cables said that part of the better spot demand was due to buying for shipment to Russia, and while the sales of 12,000 bales officially reported included only 7,000 bales of American cotton, they represented the largest day's business for months.

The market here met a good deal of resistance from the 28c level for May, which caused reactions from time to time. The offered were absorbed on comparatively moderate stockpiles, however, and the market reached the highest prices of the day in the late trading on covering by recent sellers and buying, which was attributed largely to replacing of recently liquidated long lines. January sold up to 27.10, and March to 28.10, making net advances of 55 to 65 points on the active months and of about 87 to 92 points on the low prices of early yesterday. The close was on a high note, with the market active and the increasing spot sales reported there. Private cables said that part of the better spot demand was due to buying for shipment to Russia, and while the sales of 12,000 bales officially reported included only 7,000 bales of American cotton, they represented the largest day's business for months.

Cable advices to the New York cotton exchange reported that yarns were in active demand at Manchester, and that a good business was doing in cloth. Further, the reports were circulating with reference to demand for spot cotton in the domestic markets, as some advices indicated better buying and selling in the domestic mills, while others complained of a poor business, but there was nothing to indicate any pressure of spot offerings, according to local brokers.

Exports today were 17,912 bales, making 3,997,307 so far this season. Port receipts 15,153, United States port stocks 950,495.

New York, January 18.—Spot steady; middling 28.15.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON SHOWS STRONG TONE

New Orleans, January 18.—An exceedingly strong market for cotton today, the market being higher from the opening, having no important recessions and rising to its highest toward the end of the session, when it stood up to 64 points net. The close was 52 to 54 up. March traded up to 27.05 cents a pound and closed at 27.04. All months made new high records for the season, with the 28 points up to the new high record for the season of 27.03 for middling. The continued strength in the western belt appeared to be responsible for this.

Anything unfavorable in foreign political news was wholly ignored at all stages of the trading, but much was made of further accounts of a revival in British textile trade and of reports to brokers here that Russia was a large buyer of cotton in Liverpool. Further stimulating the demand was evidence that Europe was buying both spots and contracts on this side of the water. Spot markets of the south generally were called strong and higher, prices being 10 to 15 points up to the new high record for the season of 27.03 for middling. In the late trading pressure to buy was heaviest and the explanation for this was that it was necessary to cover the long side who had sold their cotton on recent bulges were coming back into the market again.

Liverpool prices today were 10 to 15 points up to the new high record for the season of 27.03 for middling. In the late trading pressure to buy was heaviest and the explanation for this was that it was necessary to cover the long side who had sold their cotton on recent bulges were coming back into the market again.

COTTON SEED OIL.

New Orleans, January 18.—Cotton seed oil was firm and higher with hard cotton and the seed price up. The late covering movement uncovered spot oil and at close prices were 10 to 15 points up to the new high record for the season of 27.03 for middling. In the late trading pressure to buy was heaviest and the explanation for this was that it was necessary to cover the long side who had sold their cotton on recent bulges were coming back into the market again.

Dry Goods.

New York, January 18.—Cotton goods were firmer today, with advances reported in bleached cottons. A fair active business was reported on sheetings for bag purposes. Yarns were firm with a demand for knit goods for spring wear in better call. Hosiery was being bought at the recent advances. Buttons held steady. Winter dress goods were being bought in moderate quantities. Silks sold slowly.

Metals.

New York, January 18.—Copper, quiet; electrolytic spot and nearby, 34 1/2¢; futures, 35 1/2¢. Lead, steady; price unchanged. Zinc, quiet; East St. Louis spot and nearby, 28 1/2¢; futures, 28 1/2¢. Tin, steady; price unchanged. Silver, quiet; East St. Louis spot and nearby, 65 1/2¢; futures, 65 1/2¢. Steel, unchanged.

Sugar.

New York, January 18.—Raw sugar was easier and prices were lower under increased offerings with spot Canebebe quoted at 3 1/2¢ and freight, equal to 5.00¢ for centrifugal. There was a little more activity and sales were reported of about 150,000 bags of Canebebe for January and February shipment at 2 1/2¢ for centrifugal, 5.00¢ for Canebebe, and 10.00¢ for Canebebe. Final prices in raw sugar futures were 3 1/2¢ to 3 3/4¢; futures, 3 1/2¢; futures, 3 1/2¢. Refined unchanged with fine granulated at 6.50¢. Refined futures nominal.

The Eggs of Butterflies are often striking in shape and color.

REGULAR SALES
DRIVE BONDS DOWN

Continuance of New Offerings on Market Contributes—Total Sales (Par Value), $11,535,000.

New York, January 18.—Liquidation of foreign bonds and the lively competition afforded by the large volume of new offerings continued to have a depressing effect on prices in today's bond market although the reaction was not as sharp as yesterday. New low records were again established by Belgian 6s, 7 1/2s and 8s, French 5s, 5 1/2s, 6s, 6 1/2s, 7s, 7 1/2s, 8s, 8 1/2s, 9s, 9 1/2s, 10s, 10 1/2s, 11s, 11 1/2s, 12s, 12 1/2s, 13s, 13 1/2s, 14s, 14 "Turn to the Right."

(At The Forsyth.)

"Turn to the Right," this week's presentation of the Forsyth players, is one of the most interesting and delightful presentations ever offered by Forsyth theatergoers because of its delicate mixture of humor and pathos.

The play is one of those in which there is not a suggestive line. It deals with the degradation of Joe Blasco (John Lyle) to go straight when he is released from prison and how, when he meets a girl (Gus Forbes and Rankin Mansfield) try to get him to come in on a "job" he works the other way around, leading them back to "Mother Blasco's" farm in New England where their regeneration is accomplished to the great enjoyment of the audience.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Lyric.)

Atlanta has always proved exceptionally fond of magic as an entertainment and Thursday's audience at the Lyric theater proved that the ancient art of legerdemain has lost none of its attraction as an amusement feature.

The Lyric bill is headlined by the Elroy King Hoo troupe, an organization of six celestial wonder workers who have one of the most novel acts in vaudeville.

They depart from the traditional card tricks and illusions of the usual magic act and depend on startling surprises mixed liberally with broad comedy to get them over and they go over with a bang.

Another pleasing act on the bill is that of Princess Winona, an attractive Indian girl, who sings operatic selections.

"Cat and the Canary"

Seat Sale Now On

At Atlanta Theater

The opening of the seat sale for "The Cat and the Canary," the stirring attraction at the Atlanta Theater, drew a long line of theatergoers to the theater box office Thursday morning. Few plays of the last ten years have come to Atlanta with greater public endorsement or which have been backed by more intense popular appeal. A thriller of the first order, "The Cat and the Canary" has swept playgoers of New York and Chicago off their feet, and to put it in the language of the theater, has rocked them in their seats with its gripping, mystifying story. A distinguished metropolitan critic wrote: "It will spoil your night's sleep for a week, but what do you care?"

There is no play in the memory of present day theatergoers that has brought more thrills and chills and spiritual comfort to the American audience than the widespread popularity of the play is clear indication that these elements of good drama are admirably mixed and skillfully presented. "The Cat and the Canary" is first all, good, wholesome entertainment. For every child that runs down your spine there is a laugh to lift you into high spirits. It is a play by Kenneth Gordon, Inc., that is a masterpiece of the theater in Atlanta by the same company of skilled metropolitan artists seen before and carrying the same elaborate production shown in New York, Chicago and London. The return engagement at the Atlanta theater is limited to three nights and matinee, starting Monday night, January 28.

Committee Will Consider Police Situation Today

Two Important Meetings, Dealing With Department Affairs, to Be Held.

With two important committee meetings touching on matters relating to Mayor Walter A. Sims' announced police shakedown program scheduled for Friday afternoon and night, councilmen leaders were convinced Thursday that an amicable settlement of differences now pending in the police administration will be reached.

At 3 o'clock Friday afternoon the ordinance committee is scheduled to take up the proposed ordinance abolishing civil service in the police department, which was proposed at the last session of council by Alderman Jesse W. Armistead. Before taking any action on the ordinance the committee will listen to sentiments from members of the police department, including Police Chief Beavers and Detective Chief A. Lamar Poole.

A special meeting of the police committee has been called for 8 o'clock at night by Chairman Armistead, at which it is predicted arrangements will be formulated to temporarily adjust differences between Chief Beavers and Chief Poole, on one side, and the city administration on the other. Just what arrangements will be formulated to temporarily adjust differences between Chief Beavers and Chief Poole, on one side, and the city administration on the other. Just what arrangements will be formulated to temporarily adjust differences between Chief Beavers and Chief Poole, on one side, and the city administration on the other.

It is rumored in city hall circles that the committee will offer Chief Beavers and Chief Poole other "places of dignity" in the department, provided they tender their resignations at once. Both officers, however, have declined to retire from their respective positions until they are offered something in the department that meets with their approval.

Mayor Sims and several members of the ordinance committee have tentatively agreed to the proposed ordinance abolishing civil service in the police department only as it applies to the officers and not to the rank and file of the department. It is probable that the amended ordinance will be approved by the ordinance committee and placed before general council at its next meeting, February 5.

DR. M. G. CAMPBELL REPORTS AUTO LOSS

Several thefts, including that of the automobile of Dr. M. G. Campbell from East Ellis street, near the Elks' club, and a purse, which an unidentified negro snatched from the hand of Mrs. A. Herman, 445 Washington street, as she walked along the street near home, were reported to the police Thursday night.

Burglars entered the residence of J. L. Graves, at 770 Ponce de Leon avenue, and secured a small savings bank containing about $3 and a ladies' wrist watch. The watch, which was valued at $10, was stolen from the house, at 371 Lee street, was raised by thieves who secured $7 in cash and a supply of cigars and cigarettes.

A gas meter in the home of W. H. Ham, at 250 Ivy street, was broken into and robbed of $8 in cash. The family was removed from the residence of Mrs. C. B. Cannon, 62 Langhorne street, when thieves secured some fine chickens from the roost at the same address.

DR. RIDLEY TO SPEAK FOR KLAN IN FLORIDA

Will Make Address on the "Aims and Purposes" of Organization.

Datona, Fla., January 18.—A paid advertisement in a newspaper here that Dr. C. A. Ridley, of Atlanta, would deliver his lecture on the "aims and purposes" of the Ku Klux Klan here and that "the day of battle is just ahead" and the removal of Police Chief Joe Osborne from office after he had shot an anti-klan demonstrator were the outstanding developments today in the klan and anti-klan situation.

Osborne, it was said, shot Charles Pent when he declared Pent resisted arrest after he and a companion displayed a banner and unmasked two klansmen, who, with about 200 others, were parading through the streets Tuesday night. Osborne was beaten by Pent's sympathizers subsequently.

Last night the directors of the auditorium at Daytona Beach refused to allow a meeting of klansmen there after Mayor Guy C. Bailey had requested that action on the grounds that trouble might result. Notices previously had been posted on the auditorium by anti-klan warning women and children to remain away from the meeting.

In his advertisement, Dr. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist church at Atlanta, said that despite the fact his proposed lecture at Daytona Beach last night was "postponed indefinitely" by the management of the hall, he would speak there "at an early date."

Dr. Ridley laid the enforced postponement of the lecture on the grounds that the doors of "bootleggers and politicians" in the advertisement, stating that "the hour of their doom will strike." The Ku Klux Klan is here, he said, and it will be here forever. These are only skirmishes—the day of battle is just ahead.

U. S. SUSPENDS FEDERAL ROAD AID IN ARKANSAS

Washington, January 18.—(By the Associated Press.)—An ultimatum from the federal government to the state of Arkansas cutting off all federal aid funds for the building of public roads until alleged irregularities within that state are remedied was laid down at Little Rock today.

It is the first time such drastic action has been taken by the government in connection with its extensive program of assisting the states in constructing the vast highway system of the country and is interpreted as indicating the determination of the department of agriculture to insist that all states scrupulously carry out their responsibilities under the federal highway act to which they have agreed.

Declares Unsound Money Movements Menace Prosperity

Will Urge Better Economic Relations Between Bankers and Farmers.

Kansas City, Mo., January 18.—Confidence in prosperity has obscured a menace that may destroy it, it was declared here tonight by J. H. Puelicher, president of The American Bankers' association, in an address before the Bankers' club of Kansas City, Kan., and local chapters of the American Institute of Banking. He referred to the agitation for unsound money that he said has not subsided with the advent of better times but was growing to threatening proportions in many sections.

"While we can say without hesitancy that the business and financial systems of the nation are in as sound a condition as at any time in our history, the attitude of large groups of people in some parts of the country toward unsound money agitation cannot be ignored," said Mr. Puelicher. "Over-confidence in prosperity that obscures this menace may result in the destruction of the prosperity that undoubtedly lies ahead if we maintain our financial balance."

"In the middle western states the growth in unsound money doctrines and unvarnished attacks on the federal reserve system, which is the bulwark of our financial stability, are cause for serious consideration and action."

"A staunch business system imaginable can be undermined by unsound money and unsound banking theories. If they gain a foothold among the people, under the guise of measures of social justice, no business system is safe."

"We have seen the harm this can do in this country in previous periods of agitation. We see the harm it is doing today in other nations. The greatest social justice that can be established is through the maintenance of sound business."

"Business is really sound in the long run, only when it serves the best interests of all the people. Selfish interests, at times, have succeeded in gaining temporary advantages at the expense of others. But the working of democracy and the intelligence of natural economic forces sooner or later restores more equitable conditions."

"The workings of these principles could only be thwarted, and inequalities in social opportunity under our business system could be created by unsound money conditions and unsound banking methods that would result from the application of radical doctrine to the maintenance of sound business."

"In view of these facts and of conditions existing today, the American Bankers' association places particular importance on its public education activities aiming to extend the prevalence of understanding in regard to fundamental business and banking principles among all the people."

"It is not enough that bankers understand banking. It is not enough that business men understand business. They must understand each other's work. Above all, the general public must understand the basic principles of business and banking if these activities are to be protected to go on doing the public's work and serving its best interests."

Mr. Puelicher also announced that a leading item in the activities of The American Bankers' association during 1922 will be an aggressive drive to bring about better "economic acquaintance" between bankers and farmers.

"I would like to put every farmer in a bank for a while and every banker on a farm for a while," Mr. Puelicher said. "The farmer and banker have never known enough about the ins and outs of each other's job. It is going to be a main task of The American Bankers' association during the year to bridge this gap."

"The association is wholeheartedly in favor of sound measures, now being developed at Washington, for adequate credit facilities on a national scale for the farmer in keeping with the turnover and other conditions peculiar to his business. The association is also heartily in accord and will lend its support to measures for the more orderly marketing of farm products."

"But more than that the association is going to study first-hand, through qualified men, the problems and needs of the farmer and bring them home to the bankers of the country. It is also going to give the farmer, through its committee on public education and other activities, a greater opportunity than ever before to understand the fundamentals of good banking policy."

NEGROES JAILED AFTER DISCOVERY OF MANY SHOES

Two negroes, John Milligan and John Gant, were arrested at 12 Bradley street Thursday night and held by the police on suspicion following the discovery of two cases of new shoes at that address by Detectives J. E. McDonald and John C. Emery. The shoes, which were stolen from a freight shipment passing through the city, as no recent shoe thefts have been reported by local stores.

ROBERT EMERY JAILED ON FORGERY CHARGE

Robert Emery, a white man, was arrested at the Salvation Army home on Luckie street Thursday night on a charge of forgery, it being alleged that he fraudulently indorsed and cashed a check payable to "Robert Emery," which he had received through error at the postoffice general delivery window.

It is said that Emery claimed that he thought the check was really intended for him. The check was for $84.97, and when arrested Emery stated he had spent the entire amount except 35 cents.

CLUB WILL CONSIDER STREET IMPROVEMENTS
